

You can't beat our meat inspectors

According to a USDA press release received at the Times this week, a Shillington meat packer has been found guilty in U.S. Court of assaulting three federal inspection officials with a deadly weapon and forcibly interfering with official inspections.

The man, Harvey Nathan, apparently had a beef against the officials.

He faces up to ten years in jail for chasing a compliance officer and two inspectors out of Salsbury Quality Meats with a rifle.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Foreman said that this is the second time the USDA has taken action against him. She said that physical violence or gross verbal abuse of federal personnel would not be tolerated.

Save that stamp!

Students at the Maytown School recently formed a stamp club, but to make a go of it, they need stamps to discuss and trade. They would appreciate any used stamps you might get in the mail. Stamps can be mailed in or sent in with students.

The stamp club will meet once a month in the library during lunch recess.
