Friendship shows new firehouse plans to Mount Joy Council

The Friendship Fire Company presented plans for its new firehouse to Mount Joy Borough Council last Monday night.

The proposed new building, designed by architect Robert Bishop of Rheems, is a three-story brick structure with smoked glass windows.

Council granted the conditional use request after bringing up four points and being satisfied that the building, to be located on the corner of New Haven and David streets (where the condemned old Catholic church is located), would not disrupt the neighborhood.

Council first considered the question of water run-off. Borough Engineer Dan Gohn told them that this would not be a problem.

As to the second point, parking, council satisfied itself that adequate space had been provided for firemen's cars in the plans.

Increased traffic caused by firemen coming to and from the proposed station was also considered, and was decided not to be a problem. Police Chief Bruce Kline said, "It looks good from here." Firemen will use Main Street and Marietta Avenue to get to the station. They will be discouraged from using Donegal Street.

Borough manager Joe Bateman told council that the new station would not violate zoning ordinances, the fourth question about the building. He said that in his opinion, it would not hurt the neighborhood.

In other action, Council amended the bike ordinance. Starting in June bike licenses, which now expire after two years, will last as long as the person registering the bike owns it. If a bike changes hands, it will have to be re-registered. The cost of the license will remain at $1.00.

Council asked the police department to step up enforcement of the bike registration law.

The new curfew law became official at the meeting and is now in force.

More news on the Council meeting will be carried in next week's Times.

That a dark-haired young man who wears horn-rimmed glasses has fallen for well-known blonde from Mount Joy.

DID YOU HEAR—

It is rumored that a "sniffer" (?) was temporarily locked in a girls' lavatory at D.H.S. last week.

More news about more people in the Times

Birthdays, anniversaries

Three new sections have been added to the Times this week:

Birthdays
Wedding Anniversaries
Did You Hear's

"Did You Hear's" are short personal items about people living in the Donegal School District area.

All three new sections have been designed to bring Times readers more news about more people living in the area. The Susquehanna Times is starting a campaign to encourage all residents in the Donegal School District area to send in announcements of birthdays, wedding anniversaries, and other personal news about family, friends, and relatives.

With more news about more people in the newspaper, the management of the Times hopes that more residents of the area will become regular readers of the paper. The management of the Times wants the people of the area to feel that the Times is "their newspaper."

Besides including more brief items about more people, the Times is going to encourage increased use of its free classified ads, which are run in the paper without any charge to individual persons. (There is a charge, however, for classified ads placed by businesses.)

Nancy Bromer, publisher of the Times said: "I personally urge every reader of the Susquehanna Times to send us personal news about his or her friends and family. I also urge every reader to make full use of our free classified ads. We want this to be your paper."

Wedding Anniversaries
(Please send us some!)

from Barney

Friday is St. Patrick's Day, the day when all good Irishmen, and also a lot of their good friends, celebrate how wonderful it is to be Irish.

Some members of the Times staff did not feel that St. Patrick's Day could be adequately celebrated in this area without a word from "that outstanding Irishman," former Marietta Mayor Barney McDevitt.

Since Barney and Mrs. McDevitt are vacationing in Florida, the Times telephoned him down there at Princess Island near Haines City.

Here is Barney's message for St. Patrick's Day:

"I certainly am going to celebrate St. Patrick's Day down here. Tell everyone up there that Kitty and I are having a very good time down here, and we expect to be home April 1.

"Tell all the good Irishmen up there to have one on me on St. Patrick's Day."

Barney's son Pat, who now lives in Klinesville with his wife Charlene and their two daughters, provided the Times with his father's address in Florida. Asked if he also had a message for St. Patrick's Day, Pat came up with an old Irish saying he had learned from his father:

"May your soul be in heaven ten minutes before the Devil knows you're dead."
