How to wash it

Want to save energy—and money—by washing in cold water? Don't use water below 60 degrees Fahrenheit if you do, because all detergents perform poorly at that heat level.

60 to 80 degree water is O.K. for lightly soiled clothes, fabrics such as wool that shrink, or dark colors that bleed. Pre-soaking, pretreating, or more detergent may be needed in water this cold.

Water at 100 or 110 degrees is needed for durable press, synthetics, and dirtier clothes.

Hot water at 130 or 140 is necessary for heavy soiling, sturdy whites, colorfast, durable press, and diapers. Always use hot water if someone in the family is sick.

Temperature doesn't affect rinsing, so use cold water for this.

Washing machine experts can't seem to agree on whether a timer or dryness sensor is best for clothes dryers. They all agree, though, that in warm weather air drying on a line is the cheapest.

Errata

The Elizabethtown and Mount Joy Forest Fire Crew had a big surprise at their banquet last week when Auxiliary treasurer Doris Oberdorff presented at check to Blaine Gantz which paid off the land on which the new Forest Fire Station stands.

Attendance certificates were presented by warden H. Eugene Altland, who also donated ten-year pins for presentation.

The E-town/Mount Joy Forest Fire Crew covers Columbia, Mountville, Washington Boro, Marietta, Maytown, Bainbridge, Falmouth, Elizabethtown, Rheems, Mount Joy, Milton Grove, Silver Spring, Landisville, Salunga, Mount Joy Township, and surrounding townships.

The final paragraph of the story about Esther Hockenberry's 80th birthday party should have read: "Members of the Sunday School class that Mrs. Hockenberry attends at Glossbrenner Church attended her birthday party."

The Times last week mistakenly referred to the Schock Home as the "Schock Center" in a caption last week. We apologise for the error.
