New clinic at E-town hospital

A new program has been instituted at the Elizabethtown Hospital for Children and Youth. It is an interdisciplinary approach to the problem of providing properly prescribed seating and increased mobility for multi-handicapped individuals. The program is under the direction of William Gibson, M.D.

People will be seen in the monthly clinic by a team comprised of a physician, a physical therapist, an occupational therapist, a certified orthotist (brace specialist), and a rehabilitation nurse. The team, headed by Sue Keener, RPT, will order equipment and assist the family with financial matters.

The teams will help people with cerebral palsy, myelodysplasia, muscular dystrophy, spinal injury, or missing legs to appear and function as normally as possible.

The hospital's orthotics and prosthetics departments will perform the actual modification of commercially available wheelchairs on the basis of the team's recommendation. The E-town hospital has one of the best brace and limb shops in the country.

Anyone with a special seating need can make an appointment by writing to the hospital.

Most conductors, he says, are not good enough musicians to be able to do this. Although his symphonies and other works have been played by the Philadelphia Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski and less famous local groups, Chester resents conductors' attitude.

Chester's father, himself a good amateur musician, encouraged little Chester to scribble on music paper as soon as he could hold a pencil. As a result, Chester knew the notes of the staff before he knew the alphabet.

“Environment is a pretty powerful thing, much more so than we like to imagine,” he says. His interest in poetry he traces to his mother, who constantly recited poetry around the house while Chester was growing up.

“Phyllis McGinoy said that ‘Not reading poetry is a favorite pastime of the American public,’ but when poetry is published in a newspaper, people read it. Poetry seems to be longer-lived than prose. You can pack a lot into a few words.”

Chester was born in Columbia, lived in Reading for about fifty years. He lived in Lancaster for a few years but didn't like it because “people kept interrupting me.” He has lived in Mount Joy for the past four years, and likes it here.

Chester has two sisters living in Lancaster. Another sister and a brother are now dead. Chester's wife died in 1969.

Chester's brother was apparently much like him. Both men worked as music teachers; his brother was an excellent pianist (as is Chester), as well as a classical guitarist and amateur astronomer.

Chester perhaps summed up his attitude, and his life style, when he told his visitor, “You might say I'm a ‘generalist.’ I think a man should be a generalist before he becomes a specialist.”

PP&L celebrates Sun Day

PP&L will help celebrate Sun Day on May 3rd. Exhibits on solar energy and energy conservation will be displayed in front of the main PP&L office in Allentown at that time. A solar water heater and a radio operated by solar energy will be exhibited, as well as a car that runs on either batteries or gasoline.

Using the new PP&L mini computer and printer, visitors will be able to get solar water heating estimates for their homes. A solar energy teach-in will continue throughout the day at a nearby auditorium.

Sun Day is being sponsored nationally by the same people who originated Earth Day in 1970.
