Norlanco Medical Center Association

Seven years ago the citizens of the Mount Joy-Elizabethtown area were deeply concerned about the shortage of doctors within our community. The costs of setting up a medical practice had become almost prohibitive, and, knowing the the problem would get worse, interested local people got together to do something about it.

With the help of the remaining local doctors, and the time, effort, and money of thousands of people in the community, Norlanco Health Center was built.

The building, owned by the Northwest Lancaster County Medical Association, is leased to the doctors who practice there on a monthly basis. The doctors equipped the facility. Rental income goes to pay for preventive health care programs and research in the community and to provide for future expansion.

For now, the rent ($48,000 a year) is being used to amortize the mortgage, pay taxes, and maintain the building. At the present time there are 6 doctors, a physician's assistant, 2 dentists, 3 counselors, a dietician, a physical therapist, and 2 biofeedback specialists there.

The Association is guided by a board of directors. One third of the board members are from Mount Joy, one third from E-town, and one is a physician. Two others must live within eight miles.

The board now consists of: Charles Ricedorf, pres.; Glenn Irwin; Glen Fuller; Charles Hershey; C.A.S. Hollinger; Ethel Foley; Leslie Blake; Thomas Meckley; Robert Brain; Milton Good, M.D.; Andy Reymer; and Janice Ford. Financial statements are available to the public.

Any questions regarding the Association and its programs may be directed to Glen Fuller, Exec. Director, Norlanco Medical Association, RD3 Elizabethtown, PA 17022; or call 653-8448 or 367-1009.

Last Thursday, the kids at Riverview Elementary School played 'Ambulance' with the real thing. The Marietta Ambulance crew visited the students in grades one through six and brought their ambulance along.

Charles Markley, training instructor of the Marietta Ambulance Assoc. explained how the alert for an ambulance is received, how to stabilize a patient while in transport to the hospital, and what the duties of each member of the crew are. Claudia Sload, Barry Eppley and Steve Englert, all members of the ambulance crew, assisted Mr. Markley in his demonstration.

The Riverview students asked a lot of questions and had the chance to play 'patient.' One child was placed on the litter and another was given oxygen.

The ambulance visited the school as a part of the program of special reading classes taught by Mrs. Carol Lambert and Mrs. Elizabeth Smedley. "The federally funded classes are intended to motivate students who have little interest in reading," the instructors said. The children had earlier been visited by a tractor-trailer and a fire engine.

The instructors in this program, Mrs. Elizabeth Smedley, Mrs. Carol Lambert, and Mrs. Sally Hess of Grandview Elementary School, will attend the ESEA Title I conference for Federal Coordinators in Philadelphia this week.

Walker said that big government results from the people's habit of looking to Washington to solve their local problems. The U.S. government responds by passing a law which is almost impossible to repeal and applies everywhere forever, staying in effect long after the original local problem is gone.

In response to questions Walker said that he votes according to his constituents' wishes about 75% of the time, and the rest of the time according to his own mind. Some bills involve secret information or emergencies, he pointed out.

He also told the group that writing a letter is the best way to influence your congressman. Signing a petition with 50 others doesn't count as much in the legislator's mind, he said.
