Restorationists at work

Tom Spangler and Stan Koser also helped out. The building has just been nominated for the National Register, and the restorationists expect to get $103,000 over the next two years from the government to finance the fix-up job. The structure was built in 1817 and will be restored to its original appearance. The hex sign on the roof may be restored if it was there in the early 1800's.
