DHS teachers address state conference

by Linda Boozer
Three Donegal teachers shared their effective Parent Involvement Programs with Federal Coordinators in a state conference in Philadelphia, April 17 & 18. In a recent program evaluation Mr. James Holmes, Regional Reviewer for District III, ESEA Title I Programs, praised the three teachers for their exemplary parent programs and felt these programs were worthy of sharing with other school districts throughout the state.

Mrs. Sarah Hess, reading specialist at Grandview, presented her program for parents called G.R.A.S.P.

(Grandview's Reading Adventure for Supportive Parents) twice during the four day conference. Her program has been active for several years. This year the group has been using a nine month program published by American Guidance Service called STEP (Systematic Training for Effective Parenting).

Mrs. Elizabeth Smedley and Mrs. Carol Lambert, reading specialists at Riverview, also made their presentation twice at the conference. All three teachers used slides of actual meetings and displayed materials used. Mrs. Lambert and Mrs. Smedley used a unit approach that involved many parents of children in their program. Many of the activities in their unit titled, "Trucking U.S.A." have received recent news coverage. This program used student surroundings to motivate children with little interest in reading.

The three teachers were accompanied by Mrs. Barbara Portner, a parent, and their coordinator who introduced them at the Pennsylvania Association of Federal Programs Coordinators Conference. Donegal should be very proud of the achievements of these three teachers in their field.
