

Sunstruck students see solar science

Members of Mr. King's 8th grade science class at Beahm Junior High studied solar energy last week. [They were very scientific about it. They are only posing as sun worshippers in the photo above at the request of the photographer].

The kids made solar reflectors from umbrellas which they lined on the inside with aluminum foil. Mr. King told us that the makeshift parabolas are able to cook an egg on a sunny day; they create a temperature of 150 degrees at the focus.

"Of course, the umbrellas don't have much practical application," Mr. King noted, "but this project shows the kids that the sun's energy can be harnessed and could some day be a valuable energy source."

ed Salunga 14-6. The quarterfinals were played on Sunday, with Daryl Frey hurling a one-hitter, overcoming Manheim 11-1.

The semifinal game was played on Monday with pitchers Joe Garber and Keith Mueller. It was an exciting come-from-behind victory over Manor Ridge, 8-6.

The championship game was played later in the day. Daryl Frey picked up another win behind the hard hitting Mount Joy Blues, edging Strasburg 4-2.
