Harry "Wilson" Gutshall, 71, of Bainbridge, died Wednesday at 7:30 PM at Lancaster General Hospital following a brief illness. He was the husband of Evaline Kirkpatrick Gutshall.

...School Board

Mr. Hallgren advocated joining a "talent bank" among school districts. Teachers who have expertise in various fields would be lent out or brought in as consultants on three-day inter-district visits. This would be cheaper than hiring consultants, he said. The board agreed to this.

Mr. Jones will investigate the installation of light meters at the high school tennis courts. They would cost about $50 each; two meters would be needed. They would conserve electricity.

An extra Youth for Understanding student at DHS was approved after the board was told that the girl—Ilka Hardt, 17, of Germany—would not cost anything above the expense of having her in school. Lucia Gomez, 17, of Columbia, S.A., was approved previously. Ilka will live with Mr. and Mrs. John H. Brubaker. Lucia will live with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Shearer.

New roof

A contract was awarded for replacing the DHS roof. It should be done by Labor Day.

Meeting

Mr. Duke announced plans for a meeting to organize a discipline committee. The meeting, to which students, parents, teachers, administrators and board members are invited, will take place on August 29th, at 7:30 PM in the district office. Whoever attends will try to hammer out a plan for the committee's goals, if they get that far.

"This will be an open meeting," emphasized Mr. Duke. "Those who express their interest by coming will properly be the ones to set up the committee."

...Historic District

expenses over a five year period, much shorter than the usual time allowed under IRS regulations.

To get this break, you must get an Historic Preservation Certification Application from your SHPO, fill it out, and send it back. The decision is up to the SHPO, who forwards it with his recommendation to the Dept. of the Interior. Since the SHPO originally mapped out the District, his recommendation is likely to be followed.

According to a recent article in the Wall Street Journal, any building in an historic district can get certified.

If you want to tear down an income-producing property in the District, you must file the same form, but ask to be certified as not historic to avoid the denial of accelerated depreciation on the structure to be built on the same spot.

If fixing up your business property, you must follow government guidelines to get the tax break. They specify, pretty generally, that the buildings be left alone as much as possible. For example, removing things added since a certain time, to "restore" the building, is discouraged. Sandblasting is prohibited in favor of "gentle" means.

Contemporary design for additions are permitted if they don't destroy the historic nature of the building. The Wall Street Journal reports that an exterior elevator was allowed on a certified historic structure after it's material was changed from stainless steel to brass in the plans.

Next week, the Susquehanna Time hopes to have more information on possible benefits of the District for property owners.

Elaine Holden launches survey

A $20,000 matching fund grant has been awarded to the Preservation Trust of Lancaster County to conduct an architectural survey of buildings in the city, both commercial and residential.

Mrs. Elaine Holden, Mt. Joy, president of the Preservation Trust, said the city is providing $10,000 for the survey to match a $10,000 grant from the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission.
