START starts up at Riverview

START stands for Students and Teachers Accepting Responsibility Together. It's a new approach to discipline problems at Riverview Elementary School in Marietta.

Parents will get a chance to learn about START on Thursday, October 5, at 7:30 PM, when Riverview holds an open house. Representatives from each student class will outline the new program.

Teachers, not wishing to spend more time being kiddie cops and less being teachers, came up with the START concept of letting the kids police themselves. A film about the idea was shown at a school assembly and each classroom elected a representative.

When the student representatives met to hammer out a discipline code, the janitors, secretaries, cafeteria workers, and other staff were also present.

The staff sat in because the meeting was largely aimed at mess created in the bathrooms, cafeteria, and halls.

Penalties for making a mess have been tentatively set. Minor offenders will apologize, write 100 apologies, or help clean up. More serious crimes will lead to parent notification and/or writing a copy of the school rules.
