Budget

The proposed borough budget for next year will be discussed in the Council Chambers on December 12th at 7:00 PM. The proposed budget will be available for your inspection in the office after November 28th.

Tax penalty

The penalty for delinquent tax payments was set at 10%. Delinquent per capita taxes will be collected by Mrs. Margaret Booth, borough secretary.

Youth commended

Mayor Flanagan commended Marietta youth for their "fine conduct" during Halloween, and spoke the thanks of the police department and the undercover officer.

No complaints were lodged this year in connection with the holiday.

Rec for kids

A committee consisting of Harold Kulman, Jay Roberts, and John Reuter will study the idea of scheduled recreation for youths in Marietta.

$1000 of federal Revenue Sharing Funds will be set aside for playground employees' wages next summer.

Federal money requested

Dave White said that a request for more Community Development Funds will be filed. In the last two years the borough has gotten $242,000 for storm sewers, the Union Meeting House, and the Jaycees Center.

The filing will be in December. Roughly $100 thousand will be asked for to cover the cost of more storm drains, and about $200 thousand is hoped for to buy land along the river which will be part of the new park.

Personnel policy

The borough's first written personnel policy was presented to council. It will be voted on at the next meeting on December 12th. Most of the work on the document was done by Jay Roberts.

It is hoped that a written policy will clear up the confusion which has surrounded the exact duties of employees.

The idea will be studied to see if it is feasible.

I.U. Authority

President Arnold spoke at some length in favor of joining with other districts to form an I.U. 13 Authority. (The I.U., or Intermediate Unit, runs the special education programs in Lancaster and Lebanon County schools).

This authority could own property, which the I.U. cannot do under law. By owning the vans used as mobile classrooms by the I.U., instead of renting them, a great savings could be effected, said Mr. Arnold.

A clause in the lease under which the vans are rented permits sale at the end of the contract period of two years, which is up this year.

Mr. Arnold said that the vans could be bought next year for "a piddling sum" if they are then legally required. He said that the I.U. Authority idea is "the best way to save money" ever devised in Lancaster County.

It was decided to allot $50, the district's share of the legal fees to set up the authority. By paying $50 now, the right to later join the authority is ensured.

Governor Dick dangerous

Mr. Weidman said that a fence should be put up at Governor Dick to prevent kids from hurting themselves. Permission to do this was granted.

Clabell appeals

Clabell Marietta went to court over their tax assessment. It stands at $306,010 now.

Less money ahead?

The PSEA said that Act 59 might cost the district $49,853 this year, and $718,459 over the next five years.

Also, Proposition 12 in Pennsylvania (HB2767) would cut all property taxes to 1% of real market value. This, if passed, could cut Donegal district's real estate tax income by 55%, or about $900,000.

Sani Mist mystery

The Sani Mist Company is demanding it's Sani Mist machine back, which has been missing for years. These devices were used to combat athlete's foot in days gone by; they spray chemicals on the feet when a person walks onto them.

Sani Mist sent copies of agreements signed with the district in 1955 and 1962, showing that the district got four machines, and saying that only two have been returned. One was recently discovered in a corner by DHS principal Donald Drenner. Drenner stated after the meeting that he never thought the machines were of much use.

Sani Mist demands $30 for the missing machine. Several board members seemed to find the matter humorous.

Savings

It was reported that Mr. Eshleman bought $86.21 worth of goods for only $9.50 at a government surplus sale.

Tree donated

Mr. Drenner donated a tree from his yard to the high school.

More roof leaks

The Grandview roof leaked in the same spot after repairs by the Long Roofing Company. The repairs cost the district $123.55.

The ceiling problem again

Water damage on the DHS ceilings is still there. So far, no way to fix it has been found.

Fitness trail

Permission was granted for a fitness trail in Sico Park.
