How to save $20 a year

with your Electric Water Heater

- Takes about 30 minutes!
- Only about $10 worth of materials!

Smart move. Wrap a blanket of 3½"-thick insulation around your electric water heater. Because it reduces heat loss through the tank jacket, it saves heating energy. You'll save about $20 worth of electricity each and every year.

It's fast, easy and inexpensive. A roll of ordinary household insulation (R-11), some duct tape, scissors and a pair of old work gloves should do it.

For more information, call or write PP&L. Ask for our free folder on how to insulate your electric water heater. Safety note: If your water heater is not electric, check for advice from your fuel supplier before attempting to insulate it.
