

Still lively on 90th birthdays

Harry Martin Leib

Harry Leib tends house and garden

Harry Martin Leib, of 16 Fairview Street, Mount Joy, celebrated his 90th birthday on December 24.

"Yes, I was born in 1888, and I've lived here in Mount Joy all my life," he says.

Mr. Leib, despite being a nonagenarian, still does all his own housework, cooking, and other house and garden tending. He retired in 1967 from Bachman's Chocolate factory, where he worked for 22 years. He worked at other factory jobs before that, but says he never did any strenuous work during his working life. He attributes his longevity to this.

When asked if the world has changed much during his life, he replies, "It's changed a good bit. Everything's changed." He feels the world has gone downhill since he was a young man. There is more crime and violence now, he says.

Mr. Leib spends a lot of his time watching TV. He likes baseball and church programs in particular. He is a member of the Mount Joy Church of God.

Mr. Leib lives alone. His wife died some years ago. He spent Christmas with his daughter-in-law.

He has two great-grandchildren.

Mary McDevitt runs a dress shop

Mary E. McDevitt, of 16 North Bank Street, Marietta, celebrated her 90th birthday on December 24.

"She's still active, even at her age," says her son, former Marietta mayor Barney McDevitt. Mary keeps an apartment house and works as a self-employed seamstress.

Mary has many customers, including teenagers, in Marietta. Her dress shop has been open since 1956, when she retired as owner/manager of a grocery store and milk delivery business at 411 East Market.

Mary and her late husband, Paul A. McDevitt (who passed away in 1927) started their grocery in 1919 at another spot along East Market, and later moved to 411 in 1940.

Mary has 2 grandchildren, Pat and Mike, and 7 great-grandchildren.
