

Cost of feeding a person

How much does it cost to feed a person?

Food costs increase with age up to age 20, then decline. A 3-year-old costs $11.10 on the average to feed for one week. A 15-year-old boy costs $21.60. A 75-year-old man is a bargain at $19.00.

Under age 12, the sexes eat the same amount. After that, males eat more. The 15-year-old boy costs a third again more to feed than a girl of the same age.

Science Fair winners

Lisa found that the best tile is Armstrong's "fissured chandelier" at 45% sound transmitted, and the worst was Armstrong's "plain white" at 78.5%. Other brands were tested also—Armstrong just happened to have the best and worst.

Dean Bricker poses with his solar heater. Dean, the son of Amos and Janet Bricker of RD2 Mount Joy, got the idea from a magazine article. The device will boil water in 11 minutes on a sunny day. He calculated the best parabola to use, designed and built the electronic guidance system himself, and experimented with different heating tubes. The best kind: glass-covered.
