Want to save money on your automobile or home insurance premium? Tell your agent or broker to increase your "deductible."

Your deductible is simply an amount you agree to pay before your insurance company takes over in case of a loss. If you have a $100 deductible and you have a $369 insured loss, you pay the first $100 and your insurer pays the other $269.

By increasing your deductible, you'll assume the responsibility for a greater share of any loss. BUT, you'll also pay less for your coverage. A $250 deductible costs about 10 percent less than a $100 deductible. A change from a $100 to a $500 deductible will result in a saving of about 20 percent.

Insurers introduced the deductible many years ago as a means of precluding millions of small claims which would be almost as expensive to process as the large ones. The idea is to keep the cost as low as possible for insurance that will pay the larger losses that most people aren't in a position to absorb.

In this day of ever rising prices for most things you buy, higher deductibles are one way you can economize.
