Marietta Day

Marietta Day, held last Saturday, was a grand community event that drew many visitors from outside our area. In addition to a walking tour of Marietta's

Historic District and formal dedication ceremonies for a special plaque, with speeches by illustrious people, visitors were able to enjoy Ed Billett's hollow-ware collection, Earl Marley and Dave White's post cards, entertainment by the Donegal Band, old Marietta photographs, turn-of-the-century decorations at the Railroad House, and browsing through innumerable "junk" collections offered for sale on Marietta sidewalks and front porches.

The people at the Railroad House put a lot of work into decorating their hotel for Marietta Day, as you can see in the photo above.

Attic and Seller Day was also last Saturday. Many Mariettans set up stands on the sidewalks in front of their homes and sold everything and anything.
