In this photo Mike is talking to Harry and Annie Strickler about TMI while the Stricklers' sons, Harry Jr. [bigger] and Jeremy [smaller] look on.

Mike, who lives in Marietta, is a photography school grad. He took these pictures with a tripod and delayed shutter which allowed him to get into the pictures.

only people living within the five mile radius of TMI know what it was like—the terrible fear of the first few days of the accident. They feel that people can no longer trust Met Ed and the NRC, and that a total meltdown came closer than people realized.

Mrs. Katie Schroll, of Keener Rd., Bainbridge

RD1, thinks people didn't get the full story about the accident. She also said that several of her pigeons have died since the release of radiation from TMI, but she's not sure that that's the reason for their death. She feels that we should make use of wind, water, coal, and solar power, instead of nuclear power.

Ken and Karen Zeager, of Bair Rd., Bainbridge RD1, would not like to see the TMI plant reactivated. They feel once is enough to go thru something like this. Mr. Zeager questioned why New Jersey got the benefit of TMI's electricity, while we had to live next to it. Mrs. Zeager said that the worst thing was not knowing what was going on, due to the conflicting information given out by Met Ed and the NRC.

Mr. Clarence Epler, of Rt. 441, Bainbridge RD1, summed up many local residents feelings on TMI when he said, "I hope the damn thing sinks in the river."

Census takers have found about 75% of the residents opposed to the reopening of TMI, and about 25% unconcerned.
