Chester Wittell records argument between human brain, computer

by Chester Wittell [just for a laugh]

One day an argument arose
Between two things, both friends and foes,
Concerning which one was astuter;
Homo Sapiens or computer.

Computer said: "Your skull's too small.
The fact is it won't do at all.
See how big my cranium is;
For instant figuring I'm a whiz.

Truth is, my friend, I'm smart; you're dumb.
I can figure any sum
Or problem in arithmetic
Quicker than you can point a stick.

"You're too slow; your MO's phoney;
Brain too wrinkled; head too bony.
Look at me: I'm in fine fettle—
A super-brain encased in metal."

Man thought a while then raised his head.
"You may be right, my friend," he said.
"But if your argument is true,
Why must I tell you what to do?"
