FIFTEEN CENTS

New rented apartment complex for low income families proposed for Mount Joy; Lanco Planning Commission, Lancaster City favor it

Plans are being made to erect a 90-dwelling-unit housing development in Mount Joy for middle and low income families— Creekside Apartments, to be located on Lefever Road.

All 90 units in the 15 two-story buildings will be rented.

The Lancaster County Planning Commission revealed last week that the Pennsylvania Housing Finance Agency is asking for $542,112 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, to help pay rents for low income residents for a period up to 40 years.

The Mount Borough Council and the Mount Joy Planning Commission have not yet seen any plans for the development and have many questions concerning the project: the layout of the buildings, laundry facilities, recreational facilities, and pedestrian walks along Route 230.

The plan for Creekside has the backing of the County Planning Commission, Lancaster City, Lancaster County Redevelopment Authority, Lancaster City-County Human Relations Committee; Central Pennsylvania Legal Services, and the Housing Development Corporation of Lancaster County.

Borough officials have expressed no opinion of the project, about which they want more detailed information.

$1.9 million loan for sewage plant

To pay for extended work on the sewage treatment plant on South Jacob St., the Mount Joy Boro Authority has okayed a loan of almost $1.9 million from the Fulton

National Bank.

The Environmental Protection Agency is paying for some of the construction, but their payments will come later.

A record is available of old hits played on the huge Page-Wurlitzer organ at the Marietta Theater.

All the selections are played by Glenn Hough, except one, "Granada," which is played by Don Westfield.

The drawing of the theater on the album cover is by Linda Ross, Marietta, art teacher at Donegal High School.

The Marietta theater was the first movie theater in the state of Pennsylvania.

Its organ is unusual, contains 3000 pipes which range from 32 feet high and 5 feet across, down to the size of a pencil. The organ contains a marimba, a xylophone, a glockenspiel, traps, a Chinese gong, and bird whistles. It was built in 1928.

On the record are: The Entertainer, Let Me Call You Sweetheart, Ain't She Sweet?, All the Things You Are, Granada, By the Light of the Silvery Moon, Where or When, Somewhere Over the Rainbow, Say It With Music, Edelweiss, and Yankee Doodle Dandee.

The record is on sale at Appley's in Marietta.

Dr. Amin Ghali

Dr. A. Ghali, new dentist in Mount Joy, on call 'round the clock

Mount Joy has a new dentist: Amin Ghali, D.D.S.

Although he only opened his practice on June 4, it has increased rapidly. One reason why the number of his patients has grown is because Dr. Ghali will handle emergencies at any time of the day or night. He received a call from one patient in pain at 3 a.m.

Dr. Ghali moved to Mount Joy with his family, his wife Evelyn and son Timothy, 2½, with a new Ghali expected any minute, because he feels that the people in the Mount Joy area have principles that they adhere to. A Presbyterian, Dr. Ghali and his family have been attending several churches since they moved to Mount Joy.

Reared and educated in Egypt, Dr. Ghali received his undergraduate and dental training at the University of Cairo, where he held a fellowship and received specialized training in periodontics (treatment of the gums). His practice in Mount Joy, however, is general dentistry.

Dr. Ghali says that he felt honored to have been selected to study in a special training course at the dental school of the University of Pennsylvania, one of the three leading dental schools in the U.S. He still goes to Philadelphia every Thursday, where he works with three associates.

His office is located at the rear of 75 East Main Street, Mount Joy.
