Two Marietta houses

registered with Historic Preservation Trust

Two sites on Fairview Avenue, Marietta, have been recognized by the Historic Preservation Trust of Lancaster County on the basis of the architectural-historical significance of the building. Plaques denoting this recognition have been issued to the owners.

Previously plaques have been awarded in Marietta to Old Town Hall Museum, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cresswell, and Dr. and Mrs. William B. Landis, plus Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rottmund.

The property of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ross, 67 Fairview Avenue was built by the late Charles Spangler in the late 1890's. It is designated #167 on the Preservation register. Ken is president of the Marietta Restoration Associates.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Baker, 55 Fairview Avenue was also listed as #166 in the Historic Preservation Trust. Built by the late Barr Spangler circa 1850, it was owned by daughter and granddaughter until purchased in 1956 by the Bakers.

Forms for listing an application with the Preservation Trust are available from Mrs. William Landis.

Severe penalties for trapping violations

Trappers are warned by the Pennsylvania Game Commission that there are now severe penalties for numerous violations of the law involving trapping.

In the recent past, prices on furs have advanced to all-time high levels, and human greed has led to a marked increase in the theft and disturbance of traps and the removal of wildlife from the traps of others.

The penalty for beaver infractions has now been increased to $200 level.

It is now a violation to steal a trap and the fine for theft of a trap belonging to another person is $200.

The penalty for disturbing a trap has now been increased to $200.

The fine for removing wildlife from the trap of another person is increased to $200.

The penalty for taking a furbearer inclose season is $200.

Trappers are also reminded that the Game Commission may revoke all hunting and trapping license privileges for up to three years for the first trapping law violation.
