

Plans for Regency Apartments for old proceed

Plans for erecting Regency Apartments for the elderly in Mount Joy, on Route 230 west of Newcomer Road, are moving along.

Not too far from the proposed subsidized apartments for the Poor, Creekside, the proposed Regency Apartments have not as yet aroused any opposition from local residents, who were vociferously opposed to Creekside.

Pat Kenney, Marietta, head of the Human Relations Commission of Lancaster County, has said that the public rarely objects to public housing for the elderly as they do for housing for the poor. People figure that the elderly are harmless, sitting in their rocking chairs on their front porches.

Bruce Hamer, borough manager of Mount Joy and speaking for the borough council has pointed out that the site for Regency Apartments is zoned for commercial building, and will have to be rezoned before the apartments can go up. He also has pointed out that the apartments are too far from the stores in Mount Joy for elderly people to walk that distance.

Charles Patterson of the Redevelopment Authority has expressed the opinion that the proposed rents of $200 a month for the one-bedroom apartments are steep for older people.

E. Donegal wants no bottle clubs

East Donegal officials have asked the county planning commission to review a proposed ordinance to forbid the operation of "Bottle clubs" in the township.

A "bottle club" is an eating, drinking, or dancing establishment without a liquor license to which patrons bring their own bottles of liquor for their consumption on the premises.

A "Bottle club" on the Columbia Pike in Manor

Township has been the scene of numerous intoxicated disturbances in the past year.

There were rumors that investors wanted to open such a "bottle club" in East Donegal.
