Eisenhower, pres.; Wittel, v-p of student council at Beahm Jr. Hi

On October 19 the Beahm Junior High student body elected Sherry Eisenhower president of student council. The runner-up, Karen Wittel, was elected vice-president. Other candidates for the election were Amy Westerman, Pam Maxfield, Ron Clark and Joe Brady.

Student council is made up of one boy and one girl from each section of seventh and eighth grade students. Alternates serve when representatives cannot attend the weekly meetings. The student council elected their own secretary and treasurer. The secretary is Martha Wilkinson and the treasurer is Lee Ann Kelly. The advisors for student council are Mrs. Joyce Zangari and Mr. Ted Greider.

The student council members are responsible for getting class ideas and they also sponsor special days and school dances.

Sherry Eisenhower, the new president of student council, views her job as both challenging and rewarding. She feels that in her position she can really do something for the school.

"I want to get kids involved with their school," says Sherry. "They are the ones who make the school a fun place to be." Sherry especially wants to see more seventh graders involved in the school affairs.

"I want the eighth graders to make it easier for them. It is hard coming to a new school."

Sherry feels that Beahm is a good school, both for the student and the teacher. "The kids get along with each other and with the teachers," she says.

Sherry feels a special challenge in her job, because she is the first girl to hold the position of student council president at Beahm. "I hope I do a good job."

Sherry hopes to implement several new programs while president of the council. One of her concerns is the seating arrangement at lunch time. At the present time students have assigned seats, and she hopes to change this.

Sherry also would like to guarantee each student at least one study hall period. "I think that is very important."

Sherry would also like to see the yearbook improved, and she is hoping to get a school newspaper started.

Sherry is the daughter of Rita and Glenn Eisenhower, East Donegal Township.

In addition to student council she is also active in various sports and in cheerleading.
