blems with any of them. They are good kids.

"I look at many of the kids here in town who are labeled as bad kids, and I really feel for them. Many were boys that Darin played with when young. He still talks to them, but their lives have gone in different directions. I always felt that these boys were envious of Darin's home life. The had no one to go to when they wanted to discuss problems. Or when they just wanted to share some good news."

"I also feel that we have three great kids," Mr. Kolp adds. "Sure they get mad at times, and we sometimes have some pretty big fights. The great thing about our family, however, is that no one holds a grudge. If there is a big fight, you can just bet that by the next day everyone is laughing together again. You know, it is real important for a family to be able to laugh together and to have fun."

Because the Kolps live in town, their children have always been able to walk to place such as the store or their grandmother's house. The Kolps like the idea of a small town where you have easy access to various places and at the same time can feel perfectly at ease in doing so.

"There is no one to bother you in our town," says Mrs. Kolp.

The kids would always run up around the corner to their grandmother when they wanted to. "She was the only babysitter they ever had," Mrs. Kolp says.

We asked the Kolps why they thought their family was so close.

"It is because my wife and I are really involved with what the kids do," Mr. Kolp explains. "We don't just pretend that we are interested; we really are."

Butch and Darin are both very much involved with athletics. Mr. Kolp is also, and Mrs. Kolp helped to get a softball league started in Marietta. "We are interested in all kids," she says. "We want them to have constructive things to do."

Darin plays varsity football and basketball. This past fall Darin was hurt pretty badly in a football game against Elizabethtown. "That's when you know the whole family is behind you," he smiles. Butch sat with him in the hospital while Tammy waited by the phone at home. When something happens to one member of the family, every other member feels true compassion.

"It's funny," says Butch, "but when I sprain my ankle or something at school, I always call home to find out what to do. It is really good to hear mom's voice when things aren't going real great."

Butch plays field hockey, basketball and softball at college. She feels good about the support given by her family and her former high school coaches. "Mrs. Zangari, my hockey coach in high school, came down to see me play at college. That really makes a person feel good."

The Kolp family also attends the various athletic events that their children are involved in.

"We always hear comments like, 'gee, I wish my Mom and Dad would come' or 'I see the Kolps are here again.' It really makes me proud to hear people say that," says Tammy. She was involved with cheerleading and stage productions while at Donegal.

The family also knows how to joke with one another. When asked what their hobbies were, Tammy was quick to tell us of her sewing. She not only sews, but is starting to design and create her own outfits for a special look.

Darin then remarked that he makes better cakes than anyone else in the family; especially spice cakes. "Ah, ha! your secrets out."

laughed the girls. Mrs. Kolp was quick to remind them that they "can't even boil water." All of the joking was a natural part of the home life in the Kolp household.

The reason the Kolp children feel so good about their parents is, as Tammy says, "because they are behind us 100%."

"Even if it is sometimes with a foot," Mrs. Kolp chuckled.
