Carl Heilman with big bear-paw snowshoes [the old-fashioned, practical kind] and new, lightweight snowshoes [for racing]

Carl Heilman, Donegal graduate, invents new kind of snowshoe

Carl Heilman, a 1971 Donegal High graduate, has invented a new kind of snowshoe.

Mr. Heilman, who lives in snowy Brant Lake, New York, makes snowshoes which are very lightweight.

They are designed for the new sport of snowshoe racing, which is already popular in parts of Canada. Surprisingly, it also has a few adherents in Baja California, where snowshoe races are held across the sand dunes.

Carl's snowshoes meet the specifications of the United States Snowshoe Association (or USSSA), which promotes snowshoe racing in this country. The group (which can be contacted at Box 170, Corinth, New York) hopes to make snowshoe racing a scheduled event in the next Winter Olympics.

The first step in snowshoe construction, for Carl Heilman, is cutting down a suitable white ash tree. He then saws, splits and shaves the wood into long sticks which are steamed and bent into shape.

Laces are nylon-core neoprene. "It's better than rawhide," he says, "because snow won't freeze up on it. Also, it won't crack."

It takes Heilman about 12 hours to make a pair of snowshoes.

Anyone who wants more information can contact Carl Heilman at Box 213A, Brant Lake, New York.
