Township sewer controversy continues on into fifth year

The 4½ year old controversy concerning sewers in the Mount Joy Township continues.

A group of citizens is concerned that the proposed Multi-million dollar sewer will use up too much land. They wish to have the project scaled down.

The citizens faced an unfavorable federal court decision recently, but they plan to file an appeal before the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, Philadelphia, sometime in early March.

The project has been bogged down with legal debate and litigation for several years now.

The project was due to get

4th graders hold grandparent/grandperson Day to kick off 'International Year of the Family'

Mrs. Vera Cox's fourth grade classroom was the center of much excitement last Wednesday. The students at the Grandview Elementary School, Mount Joy were celebrating grandparents and grandpersons day.

Grandparent / grandperson day was this class's way of beginning 1980's "International Year of the Family". The students were not the only ones excited by the day's activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bitner, who came from Safe Harbor to see their grandchild Christa Bitner, were very pleased with the program. "Grandparents do not get to visit in the classroom very often," said Mrs. Bitner. "Now when she tells us about school, we will have a better idea of what it is really like."

The children in the class who did not have a grandparent to ask, invited an older friend or neighbor to share in the day's festivities. There were 35 "grandpersons" in attendance.

The day began when the grandparents ate lunch with their grandchildren in the cafeteria. After lunch, the grandparents and grandpersons were entertained with a Little Theater production, a Valentine filmstrip and various craft demonstrations. These activities were all planned and performed by the students.

After a trip to music class, the guests were presented with books prepared by the children. What is a Grandparent? was a collection of stories and drawings by the children.

Wendy Pekarek, in her contribution to the book, wrote: "My grandma is like pizza—so good to me."

The children then presented their Cupid Play Assembly program with seven skits created by seven different students.

The day ended with a reception for grandparents and grandpersons, including refreshments.

Tammy Edye and Connie Emenheiser, who were giving a demonstration on making heart-shaped baskets, told us that they thought the entire day had been "lots of fun!"

We had to agree that this unique method of celebrating "The International Year of the Family" certainly served a purpose.

If you do not live in the area to be covered and would like material from the Jaycees, phone 653-1262. Non-registered persons are reminded that the final day to register for spring primaries is March 20, 1980. Applications are available in the Mount Joy post office and the library as well.

No annual horse show in Marietta this year

The annual horse show, sponsored by the Marietta Lion's Club, will be postponed until 1981, it was decided at a recent meeting.

The reason for the postponement was due to the current economic situation.

Robert Spangler, president, conducted the meeting where it was announced that a membership campaign is in progress. The group will meet at the Colonial Inn for its regular February meeting on the 28th at 6:30 pm.
