An ordinance was enacted that changed the zoning along the west side of Lefever Road from high density residential to medium density residential.

An ordinance was passed that will require utilities tearing up the streets to repair pipes, etc., to secure a license and to purchase bonds and put in escrow amounts sufficient to cover any resulting damage to the streets from their work.

An ordinance was passed assuring policemen of vesting benefits in their pension plan, after a minimum of 12 years service on the force.

The maximum income to qualify for exonerations from the per capita tax was increased from $3200 to $4800 per single person.

Robert Behling's resignation from the planning commission and the zoning hearing board was accepted. Behling will be moving to another part of the state as an employee of PP&L. George McCue will replace Behling on the zoning hearing board and Ralph Gible on the planning commission.

Earl N. Brightbill was elected by Council to fill the place on Council vacated by John Harnish, who moved to the Landisville area.

The finance committee of council reported a surplus from the projects to repair Lefever Road and Plum Street. The surpluses may be applied to other projects.

The contract to reconstruct North Plum Street was awarded to B.R. Kreider, low bidder at $34,451.

A hearing will be held prior to next council meeting on May 12 concerning the proposed abandonment of some alleys.

Authorization was given to request permission to construct a swale across the Lions' Club property.

Authorization was also given to prepare an ordinance to amend legislation on sidewalks, so that ramps may be built and that other changes might be made according to certain needed specifications, without the necessity of frequently revising the ordinance.

Permission was given to study the storm drainage needs at the intersection of Marietta Avenue and New Haven Street, which may be needed as a result of the reconstruction of Marietta Avenue.

Autohaus of Lancaster was awarded the purchase of a VW Rabbit as a new car for the police force. Use of a sub-compact in police work will be pioneering for the Mount Force. Borough manager Bruce Hamer said that other municipalities will be watching Mount Joy's experience with the small car.

Bids will be accepted for a new refuse collection truck, meeting stated specifications.

Bids will also be accepted for demolition or removal of the Shatto Barber Shop building adjacent to the borough hall and owned by the borough.

The borough plans to sell the old Friendship Fire Hall, after the fire company has moved out into its new headquarters. Dennis Fackler of the fire company requested that the borough consider sharing any proceeds of the sale with the fire company, which over the years made a heavy financial investment in the maintenance and improvement of the building.

Speed machine success

Chief Bruce Kline of the Mount Joy police force reported at borough council Monday night that 68 arrests for speeding in the borough had been made in the last week, by using the police force's new speed machine. One car was clocked at 68 m.p.h. in a 35 m.p.h. zone.

The police appeared unexpectedly and at odd hours at various locations.

Kline said, "I believe it has made a difference in town already. We'll be back out with the machine. I suggest that people slow down. I think people are getting the idea."

Marietta police also have one of the speed machines and will use it shortly.

The Union Meeting House, Marietta, had its belfry replaced last Thursday. Marietta Restoration Associates and the borough have been restoring the exterior of the building to its original character.

The building, when restored, may be used as a library, the home of the MRA, an archives or a public meeting place.
