MJ Library gets new bks.

Local members of the Mount Joy High School class of 1927 presented the Mount Joy library with two books in memory of their recently deceased classmate, Pauline Bube Engle.

The new publication, Conestoga Crossroads, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, 1730-1790, is by Jerome H. Wood, Jr. The book depicts the early history of Lancaster County and emphasized the problems in forging a community out of diversified ethnic, religious and socio-economic philosophies.

Since "Hon" (as Pauline Engle was affectionately known) was a great lover of animals, the second book chosen is A Dog of Your Own by M.A. Stoneridge. This book is a complete guide to selection, caring for, training, showing, breeding and enjoying your dog. It contains many interesting and amusing facts, photographs and delightful drawings. It is a book that should appeal to dog lovers—both school children and adults.

Both books are now available for your reading pleasure at the Mount Joy Public Library and can be seen in the display window of the Library Center at 22 East Main Street.

Riverview students study dinosaurs

Mrs. Harnish's second grade class at Riverview has just completed a unit on dinosaurs. The unit grew out of a field trip to the North Museum where student interest was aroused.

The class saw a filmstrip called "Digging for Dinosaurs" and read lots of stories on the prehistoric animals, learning the names of the common ones.

After much work the entire class put together a mural which is displayed in the front show case. Students contributed materials, wrote reports, drew pictures, and helped to put the mural together.

The entire class was very fascinated with the project.
