Mount Joy Jaycee organization holds bicycle rodeo and inspection

The Mount Joy Jaycees held a bicycle rodeo and inspection at the Seiler

School Saturday, June 28. The program's aim was to teach youngsters safety procedures for riding bike's in the street.

Each child began the rodeo by answering ten questions on bicycle rules and regulations.

After the "test", bicycles were inspected, with special attention paid to peddles, handle bars, seats and tires.

Rob Stoner, the Jaycee in charge of the event, remembers taking the test himself when he was a child. "The Jaycees have been holding the rodeo for about 20 years." Stoner also noted that kids are riding safer bikes today than several years ago. "I have seen improvements over the years."

The rodeo contest included six different skill tests to improve dexterity while on a bike. Judged were braking distance, starting ability and the ability to change directions without losing control of the vehicle.

All of the kids participating in the event received bicycle certificates. Prizes were also given to the three winners of the rodeo in two different age classes. Jim Roberts Western Auto, Mount Joy, donated one set of prizes.

Mount Joy Jaycee president Alan Swanson explains some of the rules of bicycle safety to a group of youngsters who turned out for the Jaycee Bike Rodeo.
