Chester Wittell Poetry

THE TYPEWRITER

From "THE GARDEN SPOT"

Good day, my Pollux, many-keyed;
How smart and spruce you seem;
Well-oiled and ribboned for my need,
As for your due esteem!

I've known you for a long, long time;
We've hit it well together
Through all the stress of prose and rhyme
And change of wind and weather.

I rate you well. Don't ask my how,
For I know all about you.
Just let me say I wouldn't know
What I would do without you.

Yes, as I've said, you are my friend,
And as the facts can tell,
The faithful service that you lend
Is indispensable.

But one exception I must make,
And pick a crow with you;
Wich is: when I make a mistake
Why do you make one, too?

—Chester Wittell
