The film Brian's Song available from library

The feature film Brian's Song, starring James Caan, Billy Dee Williams, Jack Warden and Shelley Fabares, is available from the Lancaster County Library now through September 30.

In just a few short years, Brian's Song has acquired legendary status. The true story of the deep friendship between Gale Sayers, black halfback for the Chicago Bears, and his white teammate Brian Piccolo, culminated in Piccolo's death from cancer at 26, is generously moving and humanitarian. When it first appeared on television in 1971 it won an Emmy for best single program of the year; since then it has won virtually every major broadcasting award, including the coveted Peabody, and millions of Americans have been touched by the unusual relationship between these two football players and the triumph of that relationship over Piccolo's personal tragedy.

Brian's Song is ultimately about two men who came to love and respect each other both on and off a football field—and about the illness that cut that friendship short and at the same time made it immortal. Its message of brotherhood is strong and compelling.

Brian's Song is available free of charge. Reservations can be made by calling the Film Center at the Lancaster County Library at 394-2651.

Silk Mill

Historic Place

The Ashley and Bailey Silk Mill, East Walnut and Pine Streets, Marietta, has been added to the National Register of Historic Places, it was announced recently.

The mill is a fine and largely intact example of a late 19th century industrial structure, three stories high and constructed of brick on a rough limestone foundation. The exterior appears to be about 85 percent intact, with only minor alterations and intrusions. Brick are laid in common bond. The low-pitched gable roof has a considerable overhand on the sides, with the beams exposed beneath the eaves. Built around 1897 by Ashley and Bailey Co., the plant had later owners, some in the silk manufacturing industry and others carrying out other industrial functions. From 1897 to 1936, the firm was an important element in the county's silk manufacturing industry.

Sylvania Shoe Manufacturing Co., McSherrystown, is the owner of the industrial site.
