"In most new photos," said an unidentified member of the jury, "nothing is left to the reader's imagination. Every feature, every wrinkle of the subject's countenance is depicted in lurid clarity. The reader is treated as a passive observer of stark reality.

"Not so in the Times picture," the jury member went on. "It is safe to say that every reader looking at the Times photo is free to create his own images of Ms. Nellsen and Mrs. Baer.

"The Times photo is a courageous challenge to the reader to stop trusting photo-journalism and to revive his own creative power and paint his own subjective pictures of Ms. Ellson and Mrs. Baer."

For those of us who had a difficult time visualizing Nina Nellsen and Mrs. Victor Baer, we have here the more traditional news photograph.
