Street complained about patrons of a bar congregating on the street in early morning hours and behaving boisterously and disorderly.

Council and borough police agreed to investigate both complaints and take appropriate action to remedy both disagreeable conditions.

Council approved, with some provisos, subdivision plans for: John C. Nissley at 142-144 N. High St., Perry L. and Linda Reesor at 313 Chocolate Avenue, Joanne Brown Zink at 307-309 E. Main St. Peifer Brothers request for a subdivision at 125-127 Mount Joy Street was rejected because the request would result in too high a concentration of units per acre.

A decision on John E. Melhorn's request for a subdivision on W. Main Street was postponed until the October meeting of council. Melhorn wants to erect a building for cleaning trucks used in hauling chickens. Council wants to investigate the possibility of noxious odors in nearby residential areas before approving Melhorn's request.

A public hearing will be held at 7 p.m. in the borough hall on October 13 on possible ways to spend federal revenue sharing in 1981.

The unnamed alley going off W. Donegal Street in an easterly direction was officially abandoned by the borough.

No parking signs for Saturday and Sunday on the east side of the Mount Joy Mennonite Church were approved.

Action on a dog control ordinance was postponed for a month to allow study of the ordinance by council members.

A number of minor changes were made in the ordinances governing curb and sidewalk construction to facilitate obtaining official approval for construction.

The defense was particularly effective in the second half, holding the Bears to 11 yards and two first downs.

Indian quarterback Darrel Risberg had few opportunities to demonstrate his passing prowess, which had proved so effective in the previous week's 21-6 upset of Columbia. The Bears set up an anti-pass defense, and used it throughout the game. This defense, however, could not contain Donegal's running attack.

Indian running backs Rick Funk and Steve Bowman danced over, around and through the Elizabethtown line. Funk chalked up 107 yards on 14 carries and scored a touchdown. Bowman garnered 68 yards on 11 carries and also scored a touchdown.

The only obvious weak spot in the Indian game was the punt and kickoff return teams. Their problem seemed to be over-eagerness: they tended to leap offside on punt returns and to rush downfield too recklessly on kickoff returns. Experience, reinforced by a few choice words from head coach Gayne Deshler, should solve this problem in time for next week's very tough contest with Manheim Central.

The Manheim Central game, to be played this Friday night at Donegal, will be a real test for the Indians. Mount Joy's own Doktor Predicto is forecasting a defeat for the green warriors.

Predicto, readers will recall, is a mad mathematical genius who thinks that the game of football can be reduced to a set of number hopping around inside some computer, or withing Predicto's own overheated brain. He may be an "expert," but the experts have a habit of underestimating Donegal. (See predicto's forecasts on the back page.)

Two weeks ago, the sportswriters for the Lancaster newspapers were confidently predicting that Columbia would "chase the Indians back up Route 441." Our sportswriter, who lives within earshot of Rt. 441, heard the shriek of screaming tires on that roadway two Fridays ago, and imagined that it must be some football expert performing a high-speed 180 degree editorial about-face.

This newspaper confidently predicts that the Indians will confound Dr. Predicto and any other so-called experts who pick Manheim Central. Donegal will have the home-field advantage, and the stands should be packed (Last week's game with E-town drew 3,000 paying fans). When those fans start to holler, they will give the Indians a subtle psychological advantage which will enable them to blow Manheim Central off the field.

The Norman Sprechers married fifty years

Mr. and Mrs. Norman H. Sprecher celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a drop-in party at Landis Home West on Saturday, Sept. 6. The couple was married Sept. 6, 1930.

Mr. Sprecher retired from the Union Nation Mount Joy Bank, Mount Joy, after 50 years of service. He served as Sunday school treasurer of St. Mark's United Methodist Church. He was also assistant treasurer of the church's Building Fund for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Sprecher are still members of the church.

Mrs. Sprecher was a Sunday school teacher for 40 years. She also taught an interdenominational Bible Class (of which she is still serving as coordinator) for 17 years.

The couple enjoys traveling and Mr. Sprecher still enjoys fishing while Mrs. Sprecher spends time with vegetable and flower gardening.

The couple has resided in cottage 53, Dogwood Lane, at the Landis Homes Retirement Community for the past two years.

Over 200 relatives and friends attended their anniversary celebration.
