available to amateur genealogists attempting to trace their roots through the state of Pennsylvania. Designed to help researchers locate important early records of their ancestors, the service is broken down into three significant areas: a will index search; a naturalization records search; and an early land warrants search.

The county will index search provides the genealogist with an inventory of all people by his surname who left wills in a particular county; the year each will was probated; plus any additional information that may be listed (e.g., volume/page of the original record, file number, name of administrator or executor, place of residence, etc).

The search of county naturalization abstracts produces a list of all people by a particular surname who were naturalized in a county; the date each became a citizen of the United States; plus any additional information that may be contained in the lists (e.g., country and county of origin, port and date of entry to U.S., age, residence, sponsors' names, etc).

An examination of early land warrant rolls provides the researcher with a roster of all people with a particular surname in a county who are listed as having received such land warrants; the number of acres involved; and the date of survey.

For a listing of the Pennsylvania counties available to be searched, and the years covered for each county, researchers should send a long self-addressed stamped envelope to: Shirley G. McQuillis, Search Director, "Pennsylvania Roots," R.D.2 Box 180, Ligonier, PA 15658.
