Air Force seeks service people

Air Force recruiters will seek some 5,000 men and women with prior military service to enlist during the next 12 months. This is double the number of former service people the Air Force recruited last year.

According to MSgt. Woody McGee, Air Force recruiter here, former Air Force members must have been out of the service not more than five years. Those out less than three years may get back all their stripes. Former members of other branches must have served not more than five years and have been out of the service less than five years.

Most enlistees are assigned duties in the same career area in which they previously trained; others may select training in a specialty for which they are qualified. Additionally, all prior service volunteers must meet normal Air Force enlistment standards.

Complete details are available from Sergeant McGee, 44 S. Duke St., Lancaster, Pa., or by calling 717/299-2252.
