Flea Market Finds

Royal Doulton figure: $365

By Dan D'Imperio

Q. Can you enlighten me about my Royal Doulton figurine Gladys, HN1740?—Joanne, Hayward, Calif.

A. Members of the collecting fraternity diligently search for discontinued Royal Doulton figurines. Gladys, introduced in 1935 and withdrawn by 1949, rates as an Art Deco darling. The designer Leslie Harradine captured the contemporary woman in this finely modeled figurine. It is not a standing figure, but rather depicts the head, shoulders and folded arms of a woman, the arms resting on a plinth. She has reddish hair and a green dress, which blend beautifully with the decidedly Deco theme. Value guide: Gladys, 5 inches, $365.

Q. Several years ago I acquired a mint condition Queen Elizabeth launch brochure. Is this a sought-after item?—Mr. L. J., Gainesville, Fla.

A. The elegant brochure issued to commemorate the launching of the Queen Elizabeth on Sept. 27, 1938, is definitely a collectors' delight. The naming ceremony was performed by the Queen Mother. Because King George VI was unable to attend the affair, a letter of apology appears within the brochure. Photographs of the construction process also adorn the pages of this memento. At present fine condition copies of this launch brochure sail into private collections at prices hovering around the $100 mark!

"GLADYS" ROYAL DOULTON FIGURINE

Q. We found several old cherry stoners in the barn. Are they of interest to collectors?—Mr. and Mrs. H. L., Bloomington, Ill.

A. The United States Patent Office was besieged with new inventions for labor-saving kitchen gadgets during the 1800s. Many pertained to improvements in the field of cherry stoners. As might be expected, each new patent promised to remove the seed from the cherry with a minimum of disfiguring or cutting. There were crank handled and spring-driven models equipped with regulation devices. Any cherry stoner bearing a firm name or patent date is especially cherished. Value guide: cherry seeder, clamp-type, cast iron, $35.

Q. Would it be possible to assist me in evaluating a collection of Parker pens?—Ben, Newberry, Mich.
