Flea Market Finds

Wall pocket worth $150

By Dan D'Imperio

Q. Can you enlighten us about a wall pocket having a needlepoint insert that we acquired at a local market?—Mrs. G. R., Harrisburg, Pa.

A. Throughout the Victorian era the wall pocket was almost as heavily used as the clothing pocket. One could be found hanging in almost every room of the house, functioning as a catch-all for treasures and trifles. Most were home-crafted. Jigsaw types proliferated, with many boasting needlework or beaded design front panels. Others were handpainted. As might be expected, they came in a variety of sizes and shapes. A wall pocket often served as a lost and found department, complete with Victorian details. Value guide: wall pocket, needlework insert, 1880s, $150.

Q. Would it be possible to assist me in dating a flow blue gravy boat in the Ophir pattern?—Carol, Des Moines, Iowa.

A. Credit for this semi-porcelain flow blue dinnerware service must be given to Bourne and Leigh, Staffordshire potters of the 1890s. The embossed scrolling around the rim is practically white, while the design consists of floral sprays in blue against a background of small V's. Touches of gold highlight the scrollwork and floral areas. Most pieces bear the pattern name "Ophir" and the company trademark printed in blue on the underside. Ophir pieces rate as outstanding finds. Value guide: gravy boat, $55.

WALL POCKET

Q. How about a price list on early automobile literature? I'm an avid seeker of same.—Bill, Medford, Ore.

A. When early manuals, catalogs, calendars and related material pertaining to automobiles reach the auction block, the bidding suddenly shifts into high gear! Value guide: Auto Blue Book, 1920, $15; Automobile Oddities, 1932, $25; De Soto Instruction Manual, 1952, $10; Franklin, Operation Maintenance Repair Manual, 1931, $45; Packard Shop Manual, 1948, $30; Studebaker Owners Manual, 1924, $30.

Q. When was silver deposit glass fashionable? I just acquired a sugar bowl and creamer possessing a floral design.—Nan, Gainesville, Fla.

A. Around the turn of the century, when Art Nouveau designs were the rage, silver deposit glass swept into style. The name is most befitting because a thin coating of silver was actually deposited onto the glass by means of an electrical process. Numerous firms produced it, including the Alvin Manufacturing Co., of Rhode Island. Needless to say it proved ideal for silver wedding anniversary gifts! Silver deposit glass, dating from the early 1900s, has acquired a legion of flea market followers! Value guide: creamer and sugar bowl, florals, circa 1910, $65.
