

NEW SERIES, VOL. 1, NO. 48.]

Geo. W. Schreyer, Editor and Publisher.

Office—Front Street, three doors above Locus. Terms: The Columbia is published every Saturday morning at the low price of ONE DOLLAR A YEAR IN ADVANCE, or one dollar and fifty cents if not paid within one month of the time of subscribing. Single copies, THREE CENTS.

REMOVAL. THE UNDERSIGNED takes this medium to inform his TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT, which has been removed to the corner of Locust Street, and having received his usual stock of goods, he respectfully invites his customers to give him a call, feeling well assured from the liberal patronage that he has heretofore received, that he will be able to give satisfaction to all who may feel disposed to give him their work.

REMOVAL. THE Tailoring Establishment of B. Young has been moved up stairs in the barbershop, opposite the Washington Hotel, at which place he may be found at all times, ready to do work in the neatest and best style for all who may give him a call. He has also received the most perfect style of the day, and is prepared to execute all the different reports, he flatters himself he is the only one in the place able to do so.

AND NEW GOODS. The subscriber takes this medium to inform his friends and customers that he has received the New Store Room known as Haldeman's New Corner, being on the South West corner of Front and Locust Streets, and is now open for business, and has a good supply of READY MADE CLOTHING, SHOES AND BOOTS, and a general assortment of family groceries, together with Flour and other Meal, Oats, Corn, and Chop for horses.

MORE. The subscribers have during the past week, made a large addition to their present stock of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS, which, for elegance and cheapness, cannot be surpassed. Among which is a very large assortment of PRINTS, of all the latest styles, and in great variety.

GENTLEMEN'S DRESS GOODS. Sup. Blue and Black Cloth; Blue, Blue, Black, Brown, and Olive English Cloths; Plain and Fancy Cassimeres, Satines, Vestings, &c.

DRUGS AND MEDICINES. The subscriber has received, and flatters himself that he has secured, a large and valuable stock of the most select and purest of Drugs and Medicines, of the very best selection, and as complete as any in the place.

DRUGS! DRUGS!! DRUGS!!! WM. A. LEADER, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DRUGGIST, respectfully informs his numerous friends and customers, that he has just returned from New York and Philadelphia with a splendid assortment of all articles belonging to the DRUG BUSINESS.

MILLER & CO.'S EXPRESS. BY their own cars in charge of messengers, and under lock, DAILY, between Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, South West, North and East, by BALTIMORE MAIL TRAIN, &c.

HALF Gallon Jars and Quart Beer Bottles just received and for sale by WM. A. LEADER.

Poetry.

For the Columbia Spy.

TO MARY D. Can I forget the sunny smile, The rosy cheek and bright blue eye? The laughing tones that did beguile, My weary hours, when thou wert near.

Correspondence.

For the Columbia Spy.

MR. EDITOR:—As I was passing through your thorough the other day, I overheard some very loud talking, and on going round a corner, observed two of my acquaintances on the opposite side of the street.

THE BOROUGHS TAX. "The Borough tax," said Bill, "may be well enough, but I think it is high enough for it is double what it used to be."

THE SCHOOLS TAX. "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

THE WATER TAX. "The water tax," said I, "is the highest," said he. "The water company you know Bill, have been at great expense, as well as great trouble, in bringing the water into town, and as good water is one of the positive necessities of life, you would not think it unreasonable to pay in common with others for that."

THE SCHOOLS TAX. "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

THE SCHOOLS TAX. "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

THE SCHOOLS TAX. "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

THE SCHOOLS TAX. "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

reason why a man should drink liquor, and Joe Blueskin here knows that I told him I was determined to quit all kinds and join the Sonnies as soon as they would permit me.

"Then," said I, "Bill, if those are your sentiments give us your hand. You will always find a friend in me. The Sonnies will receive you without any trouble, and I will take upon myself to raise the funds necessary for your admission."

"And now Bill, I want to tell you a few things more. You know I used to drink just as much liquor as you do, and I had to make a great struggle to quit it, but I resolved upon it and succeeded."

"The Borough tax," said Bill, "may be well enough, but I think it is high enough for it is double what it used to be."

"The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The water tax," said I, "is the highest," said he. "The water company you know Bill, have been at great expense, as well as great trouble, in bringing the water into town, and as good water is one of the positive necessities of life, you would not think it unreasonable to pay in common with others for that."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

"The Schools Tax." "The School tax," said I, "you will certainly not complain of, when you have six children receiving the benefits of the common school system for the sum of 75 cts. annually."

Miscellaneous.

A SCENE AT SEA.

The war had broken out between England and France; Bonaparte had broken the treaty of Amiens; all was consternation amongst our people in India, particularly those who had cargoes at sea, and those who were about to return to their native land.

The chief mate was one of the finest young men I ever saw. He had just been promoted to his present post—not from neglect of his being the owner's son, but really from sterling merit.

The only bad character we had on board was the cook, a swartly, ill-looking Portuguese, who managed, somehow or other, daily to cause some disturbance amongst the seamen.

The mate, who was called Charles, was walking in the waist with a beautiful young English girl, to whom he was engaged to be married, stopping occasionally to admire the flying-fish as they skimmed over the water, pursued by their cruel destroyers.

Unconscious of the full extent of her bereavement, she was still laughing and talking as if nothing had happened, and she was still engaged to be married, stopping occasionally to admire the flying-fish as they skimmed over the water, pursued by their cruel destroyers.

Eight bells had struck the following evening, when I received a summons to attend on deck. I therefore instantly ascended, and found the whole crew, dressed in their Sunday clothes, together with the officers of the ship, and the mate's presence, assembled.

In this time the chaplain had come on deck. He said there like a child, for he loved poor Charles, and his own son. The exasperated crew would instantly have fallen on the assassin and taken soundings by their commanders' presence.

"I am told, too, that some of the retailers are chiefly poor men like you and myself. I have learned to know why the retailers can live, dress, and look so well and genteel, while we poor wretches are obliged to beg for our daily bread."

"You complain of being a poor man. Now I say you have no right to complain of being a poor man. You are poor because you are poor, and you are poor because you are poor."

"What a fool and a madman the drunkard is, and yet how many do we daily see bearing evidence of this title? He makes himself the servant and slave of the retailer, and converts for him his whiskey into money and family comfort."

"I look my place with the other passengers. Not a word was spoken, for we all believed we were about to witness the last rites performed over our friend, and consequently, stood in anxious silence; and the barboard watch, with drawn cutlasses, then withdrew a few paces, and formed a line, which completed the hollow square."

"The Spaniards have a wise saying:—'A eighteen marry your daughter to her superior; at twenty to her equal at thirty to anybody that will have her.'"

confess that my blood turned cold when I saw the knife produced, which had been used as the instrument of the murder, and the demon-like smile of the prisoner as he beheld it, stained as it was with the blood of one who had been forced by his duty to punish him.

After a strict investigation, the captain appeared to all present, when the prisoner was unanimously declared guilty.

The officers put on their hats, and the captain proceeded to pass sentence. Great was my surprise (not understanding one word which the commander said) to see the culprit throw himself on his knees, and begin to sob for mercy.

The chief mate was one of the finest young men I ever saw. He had just been promoted to his present post—not from neglect of his being the owner's son, but really from sterling merit.

The only bad character we had on board was the cook, a swartly, ill-looking Portuguese, who managed, somehow or other, daily to cause some disturbance amongst the seamen.

The mate, who was called Charles, was walking in the waist with a beautiful young English girl, to whom he was engaged to be married, stopping occasionally to admire the flying-fish as they skimmed over the water, pursued by their cruel destroyers.

Unconscious of the full extent of her bereavement, she was still laughing and talking as if nothing had happened, and she was still engaged to be married, stopping occasionally to admire the flying-fish as they skimmed over the water, pursued by their cruel destroyers.

Eight bells had struck the following evening, when I received a summons to attend on deck. I therefore instantly ascended, and found the whole crew, dressed in their Sunday clothes, together with the officers of the ship, and the mate's presence, assembled.

In this time the chaplain had come on deck. He said there like a child, for he loved poor Charles, and his own son. The exasperated crew would instantly have fallen on the assassin and taken soundings by their commanders' presence.

"I am told, too, that some of the retailers are chiefly poor men like you and myself. I have learned to know why the retailers can live, dress, and look so well and genteel, while we poor wretches are obliged to beg for our daily bread."

"You complain of being a poor man. Now I say you have no right to complain of being a poor man. You are poor because you are poor, and you are poor because you are poor."

"What a fool and a madman the drunkard is, and yet how many do we daily see bearing evidence of this title? He makes himself the servant and slave of the retailer, and converts for him his whiskey into money and family comfort."

"I look my place with the other passengers. Not a word was spoken, for we all believed we were about to witness the last rites performed over our friend, and consequently, stood in anxious silence; and the barboard watch, with drawn cutlasses, then withdrew a few paces, and formed a line, which completed the hollow square."

"The Spaniards have a wise saying:—'A eighteen marry your daughter to her superior; at twenty to her equal at thirty to anybody that will have her.'"

confess that my blood turned cold when I saw the knife produced, which had been used as the instrument of the murder, and the demon-like smile of the prisoner as he beheld it, stained as it was with the blood of one who had been forced by his duty to punish him.

After a strict investigation, the captain appeared to all present, when the prisoner was unanimously declared guilty.

The officers put on their hats, and the captain proceeded to pass sentence. Great was my surprise (not understanding one word which the commander said) to see the culprit throw himself on his knees, and begin to sob for mercy.

The chief mate was one of the finest young men I ever saw. He had just been promoted to his present post—not from neglect of his being the owner's son, but really from sterling merit.

The only bad character we had on board was the cook, a swartly, ill-looking Portuguese, who managed, somehow or other, daily to cause some disturbance amongst the seamen.

The mate, who was called Charles, was walking in the waist with a beautiful young English girl, to whom he was engaged to be married, stopping occasionally to admire the flying-fish as they skimmed over the water, pursued by their cruel destroyers.

Unconscious of the full extent of her bereavement, she was still laughing and talking as if nothing had happened, and she was still engaged to be married, stopping occasionally to admire the flying-fish as they skimmed over the water, pursued by their cruel destroyers.

Eight bells had struck the following evening, when I received a summons to attend on deck. I therefore instantly ascended, and found the whole crew, dressed in their Sunday clothes, together with the officers of the ship, and the mate's presence, assembled.

In this time the chaplain had come on deck. He said there like a child, for he loved poor Charles, and his own son. The exasperated crew would instantly have fallen on the assassin and taken soundings by their commanders' presence.

"I am told, too, that some of the retailers are chiefly poor men like you and myself. I have learned to know why the retailers can live, dress, and look so well and genteel, while we poor wretches are obliged to beg for our daily bread."

"You complain of being a poor man. Now I say you have no right to complain of being a poor man. You are poor because you are poor, and you are poor because you are poor."

"What a fool and a madman the drunkard is, and yet how many do we daily see bearing evidence of this title? He makes himself the servant and slave of the retailer, and converts for him his whiskey into money and family comfort."

"I look my place with the other passengers. Not a word was spoken, for we all believed we were about to witness the last rites performed over our friend, and consequently, stood in anxious silence; and the barboard watch, with drawn cutlasses, then withdrew a few paces, and formed a line, which completed the hollow square."

"The Spaniards have a wise saying:—'A eighteen marry your daughter to her superior; at twenty to her equal at thirty to anybody that will have her.'"

confess that my blood turned cold when I saw the knife produced, which had been used as the instrument of the murder, and the demon-like smile of the prisoner as he beheld it, stained as it was with the blood of one who had been forced by his duty to punish him.

After a strict investigation, the captain appeared to all present, when the prisoner was unanimously declared guilty.

The officers put on their hats, and the captain proceeded to pass sentence. Great was my surprise (not understanding one word which the commander said) to see the culprit throw himself on his knees, and begin to sob for mercy.

The chief mate was one of the finest young men I ever saw. He had just been promoted to his present post—not from neglect of his being the owner's son, but really from sterling merit.