A TRUST MAGNATE'S MAXIMS.

[Recently uttered by Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation.]

Brains are wanted, not money.

The man with exceptional ability is the man for whom everybody is seeking.

I think it is possible that so great a combination might be formed that no man could be found with the administrative ability, the brains to manage it. But that will not happen for many years.

The great captains of industry are not looking for money. There is plenty of that. What they want is brains—specialized brains; brains that are capable of taking hold and carrying out the plans for which they furnish the capital.

Great industrial combinations like the United States Steel corporation doubtless decrease the chances of the iron and steel maker with a limited amount of capital to make his way, but they give to the men with brains the greatest opportunity this world has ever known.

The trolley promoters ought to have no difficulty in getting an ordinance for Main street through council. The only open opposition to the one proposed was as to the part of the street the trolley company should make and keep in repair. As Main street is now in good condition, and as it is quite likely the trolley line if built will be sold out to another company before it will be necessary to make any repairs of consequence on Main street, a concession to Mr. Detwiler would be a mere matter of form.

Fresh Air Children.

Mr. J. Hassler Dietrich of New York has been through here arranging to have children placed in good homes for a period of two weeks, by the New York Tribune Fresh Air Fund.

This is a work of charity that ought to be heartily encouraged by all who are in position to do so. To be able to give happiness, and new and higher life aims to a child in distressing need of both is not without its reward, even in this life.

Two things we wish to impress in the minds of our readers. One is that the children are respectable but poor parentage. They do not come from the slums. They are not from the well-to-do classes, but from that class that earnestly endeavor to make an honorable living. The other is, that the children come clean, and free from contagious diseases. The latter is an important consideration, but we assure our readers that every one sent out is subjected to a thorough and rigid medical examination before being allowed to "go to the country." Should any get sick while here, medical attendance will be furnished by the Fund. Every child is given an enjoyment to the limit, and to the one who, in the end, receives it.

Several who had children last year, ask us to call for the same ones again this year and arrange that they can keep them for four or six instead of two weeks. This would seem to indicate that these children are a pleasure instead of a care.

For further information call on or write before July 15th to either Rev. Ephraim N. Nissley, Mount Joy, or John K. Miller, Maytown.
