the human figure. In execution it is not surpassed by any of the objects found in the Scioto Valley.

Jean Valjean, of Hugo's masterpiece, stepped from heights won under a new name and proclaimed himself a felon to save another man from suffering in his stead. President R. F. Wolfe, of the Shoe Trust, prosperous for years in a new life in Ohio, lays bare to the world, that he may thwart a gang of blackmailing scoundrels, a page of his early manhood which includes a brief term in prison. Two fine exhibits of courage these, one in fiction, one in fact. Mr. Wolfe's conscience made no coward of him. He expiated his offense long ago. He did not propose to endure an endless expiation through persecution. His example should go far among the myriad cases wherein blackmailers flourish today. He is a winner through his brave avowal not only in peace of mind and in pocket but in public confidence and approval, observes the New York World.

An illustration of what may be done in the betterment of the conditions for wage-earners, through the hearty co-operation of employer and employee, and the cultivation of a spirit of amity rather than of hostility between them, is furnished in the record of a large shoe manufactory in Boston. This establishment has voluntarily reduced the hours of work for its 2000 employes to eight. The employes are so well pleased with the new conditions that the output is as great as it was when the concern was working ten hours every day. The pay-roll is $1,000,000 annually, and the daily output is 8000 finished pairs of shoes. The change from ten to nine hours, and from nine to eight hours, has been effected without reducing the daily output of the week hands, which comprise one-fifth of the total working force. The piece hands earn $100,000 weekly as

following conclusion:

The truth is that the death rate in the camps is comparatively worse than anything Africa or Asia can show. There is nothing to match it even in the mortality figures of the Indian famines, where cholera and other epidemics have to be contended with.

Statistics are produced in proof of this assertion.

The government's advertisement for teachers for the camp children, setting forth that "the term of employment will be one year certain" is prominently displayed as evidence that the authorities have no intention of ending the "wholesale destruction of human life."
