East Donegal Items.

Jacob Inners is helping his father to strip tobacco.

Jacob Hoffines finished filling his ice house Tuesday.

Sleighting is about at an end on most of our roads here.

Did you ever know that the hide of a hippopotamus in some parts is fully two inches thick.

Jacob Strickler and sister, Maggie will leave this week for a two weeks sojourn in York county.

Some fellows are ready to stand up for the fair sex until they find themselves in a crowded car.

D. A. Hollenbaugh was elected secretary and treasurer of the Lancaster county tobacco growers' society on Monday at their annual meeting which was held in the Armory hall in Lancaster.

A certain young man of this vicinity attended an opera at Columbia one evening in company with another young man. The play was of the funny kind, and this being his first evening he took such a hearty laugh that for awhile it threatened to drown out the music of the orchestra. Laughing is said to be beneficial, but we would advise our friend Jacob to be careful as too much laughing at a time is attended with serious results.

Our New Advertisers.

Among the new advertisements which appear in this issue of the Bulletin, may be seen that of W. C. Sapp, furniture dealer at Lancaster, and we would advise all those needing anything in his line and especially the "Spring beginners," to call and inspect his large stock and see what he can do for you. He offers special inducements to those who mention the Bulletin.

Another new advertiser is the Progressive Dental Parlors, the manager of which is ever ready to do good and guaranteed work at a very reasonable compensation. Pleasant rooms and careful work are considerations which should not be forgotten by those who intend having work done in this line. In the Woolworth building.

Last but not least is Dr. Stevens, also conducting dental parlors on North Queen street, above Gansman's store, who is ever ready to execute good work for small charges and guarantees satisfaction.

Child Burned to Death.

Word received here tells of a sad occurrence at Ida Grove, Iowa, to a former resident to the borough. Mrs. Eicherly, (formerly Miss Lillie Gable), placed her six-months-old child in the carriage beside a hot stove while she went out. She was gone some time and when she returned she found that the stove had set fire to the clothing in the carriage and burned the child to death.

Mrs. Eicherly is a sister-in-law of A. B. Eicherly of this place, who was very sorry to hear of the family's misfortune.

Permanent Camp at Conewago.

The report of the board of high ranking army officers, headed by Lieutenant General Miles, which considered the question of army posts, was made public at the War Department on Tuesday. The board commends the establishment of the following new posts. Among the sites recommended for the four permanent camps is in the Conewago Valley in Lebanon, Dauphin and Lancaster counties.

A Hotel at Mount Gretna.

The special committee appointed by the Board of Managers of Pennsylvania Chautauqua for the purpose of selecting a site for the proposed hotel attended to the duties assigned to them Tuesday on the grounds at Mt. Gretna. The site chosen is located on the high ground in the western part of the grounds, overlooking the lake.

Gantz, teacher.

Lancaster County Hermit

The following appeared in a recent issue of the Sunday North American:

Gottlieb Grohdvohl, German, who came to this county about six months after the close of the civil war, has lived all these years in the open air. He has never sought shelter of a house at night or in severest winter weather. Grohdvohl has had his home this winter in the open air in a small woods with absolutely no protection save the scant clothing which covers his body and a few ragged quilts and bags with which he covers himself at night. His bed is the ground. Grohdvohl has led a nomadic life for the past 33 years and during that time has never sought the shelter of a house or barn.

Many years ago Grohdvohl met a woman of the name of Sarah Edam at Mount Joy, and she traveled with him for twenty years and shared his out door life. Eight years ago she died near Florin, and was buried alongside a fence in the woods. Since then Grohdvohl has pursued the life, traveling in summer and resting in winter. For years before the woman's death the couple lived under a projecting rock in the Conewago hills.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

A Journalist's Scheme.
General Harrison Gray Otis, editor and publisher of the Los Angeles Times, has laid before the St. Louis World's fair management a project for a monster newspaper plant at the exposition. His idea is to establish a complete newspaper outfit in the exposition grounds and to issue therefrom special editions of the papers that enter the scheme. General Otis says days could be set apart for each paper, to be known as Los Angeles Times day, St. Louis Republic day, for examples, the matrices to be set in the home offices at Chicago, Boston, St. Louis, etc., and forwarded to the managers of the undertaking at St. Louis. The general's idea is to open the doors to not only the journals of this country, but to the whole world.

No More Quiet Talks.

Our Uncle Shelby Cullom complains of "publicity" when he seeks a quiet talk with the president about Illinois appointments. He recently said: "Getting the president's ear is like opening a window and shouting at the wide, wide world. He talks too loud."

And there was a plaintive tone in the voice of our venerated statesman as he described this unusual feature of "confidential" conferences with the president. So they all say.

As far as privacy is concerned they might as well announce on a billboard the objects of their visits to the White House as to attempt to make it a matter of private conversation with the president.

Something That Will Do You Good

We know of no way in which we can be of more service to our readers than to tell them of something that will be of real good to them. For this reason we want to acquaint them with what we consider one of the very best remedies on the market for coughs, colds, and that alarming complaint, croup. We refer to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it with such good results in our family so long that it has become a household necessity. By its prompt use we haven't any doubt but that it has time and again prevented croup. The testimony is given upon our readers, experience, and we suggest that our readers, especially those who have small children, always keep it in their homes as safeguard against croup.—Camden S. C. Messenger. For sale by J. S. Carmany, Florin, Pa.

Bilious Colic

H. Seever, a carpenter and builder of Kenton, Tenn., when suffering intensely from an attack of bilious colic, sent to a near by drug store for something to relieve him. The druggist sent him a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, three doses of which effected a permanent cure. This is the only remedy that can be depended upon in the most severe cases of colic and cholera morbus. Most druggists know this and recommend it when such a medicine is called for. For sale by J. S. Carmany, Florin, Pa.

WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.]

When the house of representatives ordered a refitting and refurbishing of its hall, provision was made by which members of the last house could secure the desks they had occupied as souvenirs of their service. Any member desiring to possess his desk notified the clerk of the house and it was reserved for him, to be delivered upon payment of the average price paid for the unclaimed desks sold at auction.

Of the 361 members and delegates 238 claimed their desks. The remaining 123 were sold at auction. They brought a total of $184.50, or an average of $1.50, and at this price the reserved desks are now being delivered.

No one can identify the desks at which famous and prominent men sat in the years gone by, for in 1833-34 the seats were rearranged to accommodate the increased membership following the eleventh census. Doorkeeper Glenn thought he had secured the desk occupied by the late President McKinley while a member of the house, but is now in doubt and inclined to believe his purchase is without valuable association. The probabilities are that half a dozen desks share the honor of having served the late president, for he had to select a new seat at the beginning of every congress, and the chances of his securing the same seat twice in succession were almost infinitesimal.

Admission Only by Card.

There is much favorable comment being indulged in among members of the house regarding the recommendation of the house furnishing commission that the public be excluded from the floor of the house at all times except upon cards of admission, which the members would control.

Representative Cannon of Illinois, chairman of the commission making this report, said that he looked for favorable action on this matter by the committee on rules.

"The intention is not to keep the public from the floor of the house," continued Mr. Cannon, "but to regulate the use of the floor so that it may not be completely occupied by persons who habitually inhabit the capitol and have no earthly business there except perhaps to keep warm."

"Upon application to a member a visitor to the capitol would have no difficulty in obtaining permission to go on the floor. The regulation recommended by the commission was intended only to make such regulation as will preserve the hall of the house for the business and purposes for which it was intended."

A Disquieting Rumor.

Reports have been in circulation that the famous echoes in Statuary hall at the capitol had been ruined by the new ceiling recently put in place and just opened to public view. This was, for the guides at least, a most disquieting rumor, since few things interest tourists more than the remarkable whispering effects of this chamber. Naturally consternation was great at the report that their occupation would be gone. On investigation, however, it turns out that the report was a great exaggeration. Several of the stones, according to one of the best known of the guides, are as communicative as ever, while others are apparently obscured. Inasmuch as the dome, from which the light comes, is still covered with a cloth, which is soon to be removed, the restoration of normal conditions may work wonders.

Bridge to Be Highly Ornamental.

There is every reason to believe that the Pennsylvania Railroad company will meet the views of the war department with respect to making the proposed railroad bridge across the Potomac near the site of the old Long bridge more ornamental in appearance than was contemplated in the original plans for the structure. Secretary Root has had several informal talks with Mr. Cassatt, president of the railroad company, in regard to the matter, and Mr. Cassatt has practically promised to build a bridge that will be an ornament to the locality and in harmony with the general scheme of park development in the District, of which Potomac park, crossed by the railroad, is an important feature.

To Lead the World.

Praise of the District of Columbia and expressions of hope that congress may look on the needs of the capital of the nation with the same patriotic liberality which actuates the American mind in this respect in every section of the country are heard in hotel lobbies constantly as the sentiment of prominent men who come to Washington. Colonel John Henry Jones, prominent in the affairs of St. Louis, says, for instance: "I am glad congress is at length waking up to the possibilities of developing the nation's capital. The people throughout the country are in entire sympathy with making this city the most attractive in the world."

John Barrett, one of the delegates from the United States to the pan-American congress in the City of Mexico, called on the president and presented him with a large photograph of President Porfirio Diaz of Mexico. This photograph was sent to President Roosevelt by President Diaz, and it contains in President Diaz's handwriting the most kindly expressions of friendly feeling and warmest sympathy for this country and its executive. Mr. Barrett was given charge of the photograph by President Diaz.
