On The Roof
A rollicking, lively, laughmaking show is being presented this week at the Woolworth Roof Garden, at Lancaster. Conroy, LeMaire & Company in their merry skit "King for a Night," are funny enough to make anyone forget the hot weather. William Dillon, the man of a thousand songs, writer of Every Little Bit Added to What You've Got Makes Just a Little Bit More," and many other popular songs, is another big feature. A bill strong with comedy is announced for next week headed by the celebrated team of Irish comedians, Girard & Cardner, who will present the laughable skit "Dooley and the Diamond." The Edison moving pictures shown at the Roof Garden are especially noteworthy, and an entire new set will be presented next week.

Imported Chinaware
Dr. E. W. Garber has just received a shipment of imported chi a shipped direct and expressly for him from Austria. The work was also designed for him and is in the shape of souvenir dishes upon which are excellent reproductions of the pike bridge east of town, the Presbyterian church at Donegal Springs, Kraybill's Mennonite church and the school house in this place. They are indeed very beautiful.

CHILDREN HAD NO SHELTER

Sight That Set Well-Fed Englishman to Work Providing Homes for Waifs.

When a kind-hearted young doctor told a company of well-fed Englishmen in London, about 40 years ago, that homeless children slept outdoors in the city even in the dead of winter, his hearers doubted the statement. They thought it possible says Youth's Companion, that a child was occasionally without shelter at night, but it was contrary to reason that any considerable number could be in such straits. The young doctor told the company that within a short ride of where they were gathered he could show them a score of thinly clad boys asleep under such conditions as he had described. Still doubting, the men went out into the wintry night and were led to a square in which more than 70 waifs were found sleeping in boxes and barrels, and anywhere they could get out of the wind. The men were convinced, and helped the doctor in his work of rescuing such waifs. Since that time he has found homes for more than 50,000 orphans, and has not turned away from his doors a single destitute boy or girl. He knew that the poorest accommodation that he could give them, even though it were only a place to sleep on the floor in a warm room, was better than the best that they could hope to find in the streets. Recently this large-hearted philanthropist died at the age of 60 years. His name was Thomas John Barnardo.

HIS FEAST ON HOG ISLAND

Philadelphian's Greed for Oranges Gives Chaney for a Joke at His Expense.

Hog island is a little British spot in the tropics and lies just across the harbor from Nassau, and its inhabitants have lately been immensely enjoying a tame little joke on a visiting citizen of Philadelphia. Hog island is known all over the world for its natural magnificence and the waters of which are like one large mosaic, containing all the colors of the rainbow, and to the imagination of the eye, a hundred others.

Here there is a small army of boatmen, who row sightseers across the bay to the island. On landing the visitor enters a large orange grove, of which fruit he is allowed to partake to his heart's content and the waters of which are like one large mosaic, containing all the colors of the rainbow, and to the imagination of the eye, a hundred others.

Now, the American citizen has a liking for oranges, and when he found himself in the heart of the district where they grow and with such a tempting offer before him he just simply couldn't withhold himself. So he started in with vengeance to eat as large of its luscious fruit. When he had finished eating the thirtieth orange, however, his conscience pricked him. Seeking out the owner of the grove—for that generous English gentleman does duty as cashier—he told him what he had done and offered to pay him in accordance. "That's all right," was the reply, "you don't owe me any more. You see, you are on Hog island."

New Varieties, a Beautiful Half-Acre of Petunias—New Forms of Old Flowers.

The newer verbenas have few leaves, a short upright stem and a truss, as the bunch of flowers is called, that attains a circumference of from 12 to 15 inches. The individual flowers, if the plants are properly grown are as large as a silver quarter. Their stocky growth has made them even stronger than they were, and they bloom now from seed during a whole summer. Some of the new colors this year are "Aurora Boreale," which is a vivid scarlet, and the "Commandante Marechand," which is a blend of garnet and maroon.

One of the most beautiful exhibits every year in a garden near Bernardsville is a half acre devoted wholly to various kinds of petunias. They have been planted there as freely as if they were grass seed and the ground is covered with them. They are naturally a wonderful blend of color and there is scarcely a conceivable shade in the lighter hues that is not to be found there. The petunias are single flowers, and it is easy to conceive how much more beautiful this would be if the new double flower had been used instead. The doubles are exquisite crumpled balls of color, like velvet in their depth, and there are fluted petals, fringed petals and petals edged with two or three shades that contrast beautifully with the prevailing tint of the petals. Some of the petals are crossed with different stripes of color. The shades in which the double petunias grow are sufficiently descriptive of the varieties to be had. They are amethyst, garnet, pink and crimson with green edges, pure rose pink, brilliant rosy scarlet, blended red and white, pure white, and mottled crimson and pink.

Primroses, in mauve, white and pink are nearly twice the size they were and the double poppy of the day is a ball of color as large as a peony, bearing only in its name and its brilliant scarlet hue a strong resemblance to its prototype. They are most beautiful in the solid colors, although the variegated combinations of color are popular. Lovers of the old-fashioned single poppy can still buy that in a much larger form than it used to grow. Asters are grown on the plants seen this year until they are as large as chrysanthemums. All the old-fashioned flowers, such as phlox, larkspur, sweet william and wall flowers have gained in the experiments made by the growers during the past year, and they hopefully promise more for the future.

About Plants.
It is best to wait until the plants shows it needs water, then give it a good dousing in the bathtub. A plant with its roots constantly in mud cannot thrive. If hot-house plants are watered once a week with water in which there is a little ammonia they will thrive well. Sometimes small white worms are found in the earth. Ammonia or lime water will kill them. Stir up the soil, to expose as many as possible, before pouring it on.
