HOW BROWN BUILDS

Will Erect a Handsome Structure for the Universal Hardware Works

Brown, the builder, of Philadelphia, has just issued a small booklet from which we clipped the following: "We have just secured a contract for surveying and for designing and building a factory for the Universal Hardware Works, Inc. at Mount Joy, Pa.

This company manufactures a high grade of fruit and meat choppers. The building which we are to erect will be used as a machine shop for manufacturing these articles.

This building will be about 40 feet wide and 200 feet long, one story high. It is to be built of slow burning construction, designed to give a maximum amount of light, to be easily heated and ventilated, and to afford employes the best working conditions possible.

The building has been so designed that additions to it can be easily made as the growth of the business necessitates.

The building will have brick outside walls and will be perfectly plain in every respect except for a limestone entrance. It has been so designed as to minimize the cost of maintenance and thus to show the largest possible return on the investment. The only attempt to beautify the building has been made in the entrance, which is the only part of a business building where decorative detail would ever be noticed.

The floor will be of concrete with a cement finish, capable of carrying a load of four thousand pounds to the square foot. Wooden supporting columns will be spaced on 20 foot centers. This building will cost, including heating and ventilating systems, approximately ten thousand dollars.

This company chose to give to us their contract, because the work that we have done and the results that we could show them proved to them that our knowledge of the building business and our broad experience would give them better results for less money than they could procure from other builders.

Every manufacturer should realize the effect on his business should a fire destroy his plant. It would mean a great loss in the tremendous amount of time he had spent in building up his business and getting his customers. Customers would be forced to buy from competitors and in many cases it might be difficult to regain their trade.

An insurance policy protects against the loss of stock, it does not protect against the loss of time, business organization and customers.

The use of concrete, structural steel or slow burning construction eliminates to a great extent the possible loss from fire as well as reducing insurance to a minimum. Remember, the design of a factory is an important consideration, as well as the material used, in securing low insurance.
