ONE WAY TO SAVE MONEY.

Contract a Good Sized Debt, Then Work Hard Till It's Paid.

Perhaps you think you can't save. You have debts. Well, the way to cure a debt is by contracting another one. You meet your debts, do you not? Well, contract a debt to the bank. Just agree with yourself that you owe the bank $1,000 and must pay this debt in small installments—a dollar or two or five out of each week's wages. Then pay that debt. The bank, unlike your other creditors, pays you for the use of your money and will return it to you in time with interest. For you are a partner with it. It is your bank and its business is to make money for you.

When you start a bank account you become a capitalist, a banker, an investor in securities and a substantial citizen, interested in the development of your town and country. You acquire standing, respect, peace of mind. Your point of view is changed. You no longer "see red." Your fellow men appear to you as they really are—co-workers and friends—not oppressors or schemers against your welfare. You have done your part, you have unified your interests with the right ones—caught step with the march of progress.

It is only those who resist this march that get hurt. Don't get under the car—get in it. Going in debt to the bank means going in debt to yourself, to your family, to the general good. This should be the most sacred of your obligations and should come first. It is the "preferred creditor," and you'll find that all your other creditors will be willing to stand back while you pay it. For it insures the payment of every other obligation. A man who is saving is helped and helped. His credit is good. He can "do things." People place confidence in him.—Chicago Tribune.

DAVID GARRICK.

The Great Actor's Art and His Wife's Ruffled Feelings.

Mrs. Garrick's admiration of her husband's dramatic talents was intense, and on his great nights she would hang over her box next the stage in rapturous delight. The one flaw in her idol, she claimed, was a taste for low life, for which she blamed him greatly, insisting that he loved better to play Scrub to a low lived audience than one of his superior characters before an audience of taste.

On one particular occasion she was in her box in the theater when Garrick's impersonation of Richard III. was applauded to the echo. In that day a farce followed the tragedy of the evening, and as Mrs. Garrick rose to leave before it her husband came to the box to say he had some business in the greenroom which would detain him, so most unwillingly the lady was obliged to acquiesce and remain through the closing entertainment. This proved to be a comical series of blundering adventures which had befallen a countryman who had left his farm to see London and on his return gave his neighbors an account of the wonders he had met.

This characterization was received with such peals of applause that Mrs. Garrick, ever zealous of her husband's fame, began to think it rivalled those lately lavished on Richard III. Her feelings were nearly worked up to fever heat when she was attracted by the frantic efforts of her little spaniel dog to overleap the balcony that separated him from the stage, when she immediately became aware of the truth that the actor was Garrick and exclaimed, "Strange that a dog should know his master when the woman who loved him best in the world could not pierce his disguise."

Was Ten on Monday

On Monday Miss Zelma Coolidge was ten years old and in honor of the event a number of her young friends met at her home on South Market street and tendered her a birthday surprise. TELL YOUR FRIENDS.

Those who do not tell their experience which has been acquired during several years' close application to the details of farming are withholding valuable information from their friends who need this information. Do not deprive your neighbor of that which does not make you poorer, but would make him richer indeed.

USE OF ORCHARD HEATERS.

Coming to Be Regarded as a Necessity in All Sections.

The manufacturers of oil heaters have been afforded a great boom for their business by the success which a few commercial growers report in saving their fruit crops by their use from destruction during hard frosts, says the Farm Progress.

The most notable illustration of their value was demonstrated in the extensive orchards of a grower in Iowa, who harvested an unusually heavy and fine crop of apples, for which he fought sleet storms and severe freezes for nine successive days in the spring and saved the fruit at an expense—for equipment, oil and labor—of 7 cents per bushel, which at the present price of apples gave him after deducting subsequent expenses a good margin of profit.

The heaters are of the simplest construction, made of sheet iron and so covered that water from rain or snow cannot put out the flame. Each holds from one to six quarts of oil, and from 80 to 100 are required for each acre of orchard. The price of the best oil heaters ranges from $120 to $750 per thousand.

They are largely used in certain sections of California for the protection of the orange crops, and also in the melon growing districts of Colorado, and will no doubt come in time to be considered a convenience, if not a necessity, by fruit growers and gardeners in all sections of the country.

Progress in farming is an individual problem from the solution of which the state, the nation and the world must benefit.

Live Stock Notes.

Few horses can digest perfectly clear timothy hay.

Never give drugs to a horse any more than you would to a baby unless he is downright sick. Shutting off his feed will cure many minor ills.

Give the ewes a little grain if the pasture is short. About one-half pound each per day of wheat bran and oats will put them in good flesh for winter.

Many hog raisers think that unthrashed wheat is better for sows and young hogs carried through the winter than thrashed grain. By taking the grain from the straw they get considerable roughage, are compelled to eat more slowly and chew the grain better.

St. Martin and the Dictionary.

St. Martin when he divided his cape with a naked beggar at the gate of Amiens gave also two words to the English language. The oratory in which this torn cape was preserved as a sacred banner acquired the name of "chappelle" (from the French "chapel") and thus our English words "chapel" and "chaplain" are derived.—Westminster Gazette.

"You must have called me this morning, Sylvana. It was 12:30 when I reached the office. And I had an important appointment for 1 o'clock, too."

"Why, I called you at 7:30, John."

"Was the clock right?"

"Yes; I set it last night when you came home. You remember I called downstairs when you came in and asked you what time it was. And you said 10:30. The clock in my room said 1:45, so I turned it back to agree with your watch, and, of course, I called you by the correct time this morning."—Buffalo Express.

Prairie Chickens.

The prairie chicken was once so abundant that in Kentucky, where the slave owners fed it to the negroes, they tired of it and begged their masters not to make them eat it. It was commonly known as "nigger bird." To find the prairie chicken now one must tramp the isolated regions of the west. Even in Indian territory a hunter is considered lucky if he even gets a shot at one. I have heard the old settlers say that the prairie chicken was once more abundant than the English sparrow is now.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Same Old Issue.

He had just launched the momentous question.

"The pretty girl shook her head."

"No," she replied. Then she blithely added, "But we can always remain good friends."

He smiled bitterly as he reached for his hat. "Reciprocity without annexation!" he muttered and stalked away.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Resolution of Respect

Resolved, That it has seemed best to the all wise Ruler to take from our midst our dear sister, Mrs. Leah Haines.

Resolved, That in the dispensation of providence the Home Department of the United Brethren Sunday School of Mount Joy, has lost a faithful member and willing worker.

Resolved, That we commend to the grace of God the family that amid their tears and mourning, they may be enabled to look to Him that heathen sorrow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family and also inserted in the Mount Joy Bulletin.
