

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

Dr. Pierce

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of known composition, not even though the ignorant dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

INTERESTING NEWS FOR OUR MANY RURAL FRIENDS

The Storing of Leaves and the Uses to Which They May be Put—The Cause of Foaming in the Churn and How to Prevent it

One seldom sees a vicious horse that is bad by nature. He is usually spoiled by his trainer in his youth. If you have a winning colt that you expect to be a prize winner at the fair next year let him have a box stall all by himself. Many colts are being injured by being fed with old horses.

A vicious old horse in a herd of horses in the pasture is likely to do great harm by biting and kicking. She should either be hobbled or kept entirely away from other horses.

When milk foams in the churn it is sometimes due to the fact that it is too warm or the churn is too full, but occasionally it results from the presence of certain forms of bacilli. These do not occur very often but when they once gain access to the milk or the pails or churn they are sure to cause trouble, and it takes some time to get rid of them. The cows should be thoroughly washed and sprayed with an effective but harmless disinfectant and the barn should be sprayed and then thoroughly white washed. Cover every inch of the interior of the barn including the stalls and mangers. Next wash the udders of the cow thoroughly before each milking and mix with the water a little disinfectant. Wipe the udder and teats dry with a clean cloth. The first milk should be milked into a separate vessel and thrown away for sometimes the bacilli lurks in the openings of the teats, and if this is allowed to enter the milk it may contaminate the entire supply. The milking pails and all vessels containing the milk should be thoroughly boiled in water containing a little concentrated lye for at least two hours and this sterilization should be repeated for three or four days. The room in which the milk is kept should also be thoroughly cleansed and disinfected. This is very important because no matter how clean your cows and barn and vessels may be, if there is the least contamination left in old milk or butter or in anything that is left in the room where milk is kept the bacilli will continue to grow.

If farmers only understood the many uses to which leaves could be put, more of them would be stored. Some may think it takes too much time and labor, but they are easily and quickly gathered in various ways. One good plan is to have cheap barrels handy, fill them with leaves, and set them away where rain or snow will not reach them. Another method by which the storage of leaves may be accomplished is that of using common gummy or burlap sacks. These, also, may be stored away without emptying the sacks, and they will be in convenient shape to use a few at a time during the winter.

If one has only a small number of sacks, the leaves may be carried and emptied from the sacks into some outbuilding not in use; but where one desires to store a considerable quantity, we find that bed-sheets, or similar pieces of cloth, are excellent for the purpose. Simply spread them on the ground, rake and pile them on the sheets; catch hold of each of the four corners and draw them together. A large quantity can be carried in this manner, and when it is desired to empty the sheets let go of one corner and allow the leaves to roll out. There are numerous uses to which the stored leaves may be put. They make a suitable and economical lining for the storage pits. The poultry scratching shed is another place they may be utilized to a good advantage. We also have used them for nesting. They are excellent for bedding purposes in the dairy barn, the hog house and the horse stalls. Then, after they have been used for any of these purposes, they form a fertilizer that is hard to equal, they having absorbed all the rich liquids and juices wherever they have been used. These are deposited with the leaves when they are scattered over the soil, and the rejuvenating effect is thus greatly enhanced by the combined influences of the liquids and rotted manure.
