DREAM FANTASIES

Cause and Effect in the Visions That Come in Sleep.

A DREAM'S CURIOUS SEQUEL.

It Explained the Meaning of the Oft-Recurring Fancy That a Cat Was Clawing the Slumberer's Throat

It was a personal experience of a singular character that first impressed upon me, some years ago, the importance of dreams as a subject for serious investigation, says H. Addison Bruce in the Outlook.

It had shared the opinion prevailing among laymen—and, it would seem, among most scientists also—that dreams are entirely fanciful and meaningless. But my experience was such I could no longer believe this.

To state it briefly, it involved the recurrence of a most bizarre dream. At least twenty times during a period of six months I had the same dream—namely, that a cat was clawing at my throat.

I had suffered no pain, not even inconvenience, from the growth in my throat. In fact I had not consciously been aware of its presence. But unquestionably the organic changes accompanying it had given rise to sensations which, slight though they were, had made an impression on my sleeping consciousness sufficient to excite it to activity.

An experience was reported by Alfred Maury, one of the earliest scientific investigators of the phenomena of sleep, who dreamed that he was living in Paris during the Terror and had been put on the proscribed list.

After many exciting adventures he was captured, tried and sentenced to execution. He saw himself dragged through the streets amid a clamorous multitude and forced to mount the scaffold and bare his neck to the fatal blow.

Then I veritably awoke and as I did so distinctly heard on the pavement below my window the sound of hurried footsteps and a voice crying excitedly, "Stop, stop!"

At once it was clear that these two words, penetrating to my sleeping consciousness, had provided the necessary stimulus to set up a dream process which, in the fraction of a second, had interpreted them as best it could and had presented the results of its interpretation in the form of a curious little narrative of nocturnal adventure.

Dreams may be produced by the use of artificial irritants. One sleeper, whose nose was lightly tickled with a feather, had a horrible dream of a mask of pitch being alternately applied to and drawn violently from his face.

Another, at whose feet a hot water bag was placed, dreamed that he was walking over hot lava. In a second experiment of the same sort the accidental slipping of the cover from the hot water bag led to an elaborate dream of capture and torture by Rocky mountain bandits who insisted that the dreamer knew how to convert copper into gold and held his naked feet in a fire in order to compel him to communicate his valuable secret.

THE PARTHENON.

It Was the Most Beautiful Edifice Ever Erected by Man.

The Parthenon on the Acropolis at Athens, the most beautiful edifice ever erected by the hand of man, was wrecked by a Venetian bomb on Sept. 26, 1687.

When the sun rose on the morning of that evil day the "finest building on the finest site in the world" stood arrayed in all its glory, just as it did when Pericles received it from the hands of its divine architects and builders, just as it did when Plato and Socrates gazed with wonder upon its simple majesty, and when that day's sun went down the glorious temple was a wreck.

The master artists of the nations have been trying for more than 2000 years to make something that would look like the Parthenon, but so far their efforts have been vain, and the dismantled pile on the Acropolis still wears the crown of architectural excellence.

This famous building, made of the finest Pentelic marble, is 228 feet in length by 101 feet in width, with a height at the apex of the pediment of sixty-five feet. Its cost was $3,250,000, reckoned in present day values. The renowned frieze of the Parthenon ran along the top of the wall forty feet from the ground. It was three and a half feet in height and 520 feet in length and represented the great Panathenic procession, which was held every five years in honor of Athena, the protecting goddess of the city.

For 2,000 years this glorious temple stood there on the Acropolis as perfect as it was when Phidias completed it nearly 500 years before the birth of Christ, and it would have been standing just as complete today but for that rascally Venetian shell. In the year mentioned above Athens, still in the possession of the Turks, was besieged by the Venetians, and a bomb from one of their guns falling through the roof of the Parthenon, in which the Turks had stored a lot of powder, left it the ruin it has ever since remained.

A Way They Have In Germany. "One day while I was in a big beer garden in Bavaria," said a returned traveler, "a handsome young officer in a magnificent new uniform came in and seated himself at a nearby table. There was brought to him a big radish, several slices of rye bread and a tall mug of beer. Then I saw that handsome young officer draw from the tail pocket of that magnificent uniform something wrapped in paper. This he unrolled, a sweet smile playing about his blond mustache as he did so, and at last a piece of sausage seven or eight inches long was revealed. My astonishment at this sight was carefully concealed. I doubt if any officer of our infantry would dare attempt such a movement on the subsistence department."

The Cleanliness of Animals. Man seems to be the only animal whose food soils him, making necessary much washing and shieldlike bibs and napkins. Moles living in the earth and eating slimy worms are yet as clean as seals or fishes, whose lives are one perpetual wash. The squirrels in these resinous woods keep themselves clean in some mysterious way; not a hair is sticky, though they handle the gummy cones and glide about apparently without care. The birds, too, are clean, though they seem to make a good deal of fuss washing and cleaning their feathers.—From "My First Summer in the Sierras," by John Muir.

Old Wedgwood. Modern Wedgwood is of greatly inferior quality, and it seems improbable that the success attained by Josiah Wedgwood will ever be reached again. Of all his creations in Jasper his reproduction of the famous Portland, or Barberian, vase (the original of which is in the British museum) is the most important. About 1790 Wedgwood at great expense attempted to make fifty replicas of his vase, but it is believed that not more than thirty-five were actually finished. Of these original pieces only about fifteen have been identified.—Argonaut.

Ancient Sausages. Antiquaries are baffled in their attempts to ascertain when sausages first became an article of human consumption. We know at least that among the ancient Greeks sausages, called "allantes" and "chordai," were a common article of diet, and every schoolboy knows, or ought to know, that sausages, black puddings and sausage sellers appear in the comedies of Aristophanes.—London Telegraph.

Sad Feelings. "Jaggy takes even his pleasures sadly." "He does?" "Yes, and to such an extent that when he goes on a spree he never sees green serpents, pink monkeys or purple elephants like other fellows. He sees nothing but black snakes."—Baltimore American.

Easily Spotted. "Is this dress apt to be easily spotted?" she inquired. "At least four blocks off, I should judge," answered the gentlemanly clerk.—Washington Herald.

Who keeps one end in view makes all things sure.—Browning.
