AN OLD TIMER

Opening of the Season Makes Us
Think Back a Bit

Recently we happened to come across an old photograph of the Dauntless base ball club, undoubtedly the best team in these parts at that time. We had the photo enlarged, placed it on display in our window, and it attracted considerable attention.

About the time the members of this famous club were "has been," they held a reunion here and incidentally played a game of ball, a full account of which is appended, as it appeared in a local paper. The game was played Sept. 28, 1895.

Partly by accident and partly by design the members of the old Dauntless base ball club met here on Wednesday. Ten years have elapsed since the club disbanded and the boys took up the more serious parts of the country.

The reunion was not planned in advance. A. L. Stoler who is Chief of Police of Oskaloosa, Iowa, was the first to drop in. He was followed a week later by P. S. Pyle, P. R. R. Train Despatcher at Pittsburgh, and W. Howard Eberle, handmaster, of Wilmington, Del. This left only E. E. Marsh, of Philadelphia and John Affebach of Lancaster, to complete the team. Relying upon their sure presence a game was arranged with Elizabethtown for Wednesday afternoon.

There was a large attendance of the old admirers of the club, with whom the Dauntless is a name to conjure by, and many of the younger generation, who having been impressed by the stories of the prowess of the old club, became imbued with the idea that there were but three baseball clubs those days the old Atlantic, of Philadelphia first, the Dauntless second and the old Newtown rivals of the Dauntless, an "easy third."

The boys had heard their games played over inning with every feature as though they had witnessed them, and now at last they were going to see the Dauntless play. They had hardly dared dream of such good fortune.

The Game
There was considerable warming and limbering up necessary. March, the third base man, had the misfortune to lose a leg several years ago, but he took a position at first, threw down his crutches and for half an hour he took and returned everything that came to him, with his old time speed and precision.

The game was marked by some remarkably good work on the part of the Elizabethtown Club, which was generously applauded but the audience was interested in what the Dauntless was doing. They didn't do much but they impressed every body with the fact that if they can't play ball now, their action showed it was not ever thus.

The score of to 4 in favor of Elizabethtown will indicate the kind of game it was, yet it was not featureless.

Harry Stoler worked an old trick on the Elizabethtown pitcher that brought in two runs and set the crowd wild. There was a man on the coach line. He started to run home and the pitcher threw the ball over the catcher's head in an attempt to catch him at home. As a result two runs came in and the laugh was on Blough.

In the evening the two clubs and their friends congregated at the Exchange Hotel, where Mr. McGinnis had arranged to entertain all who came.

They swapped baseball stories, sang and danced to music of Howard Eberle's cornet (parenthetically, Howard plays a cornet as well as he plays ball) until Philadelphia Express reaches here and carried the east bound visitors away.

The event was a most enjoyable one and may never recur. If it does not the memory of the first reunion will be ever fresh.

The team as constituted was as follows: Pyle, p. Eberle, c. A. Stoler 1b, Jac. Zeller, 2b, Benj. Brown 3b, Moony, s. H. G. Stoler, r. f. Affebach, c. f., Miller, I. f.

Mr. Seward A. Ricker photographed the club after the game and succeeded in getting an excellent picture.

Long live the Dauntless.

ONE WAY TO SAVE MONEY.

Contract a Good Sized Debt, Then Work Hard Till It's Paid.

Perhaps you think you can't save. You have debts. Well, the way to cure a debt is by contracting another one. You meet your debts, do you not? Well, contract a debt to the bank. Just agree with yourself that you owe the bank $1,000 and must pay this debt in small installments—a dollar or two or five out of each week's wages. Then pay that debt. The bank, unlike your other creditors, pays you for the use of your money and will return it to you in time with interest. For you are a partner with it. It is your bank and its business is to make money for you.

When you start a bank account you become a capitalist, a banker, an investor in securities and a substantial citizen. Interested in the development of your town and country. You acquire standing, respect, peace of mind. Your point of view is changed. You no longer "see red." Your fellow men appear to you as they really are—co-workers and friends—not oppressors or schemers against your welfare. You have done your part, you have unified your interests with the right ones—caught step with the march of progress.

It is only those who resist this march that get hurt. Don't get under the carpet in it. Going in debt to the bank means going in debt to yourself, to your family, to the general good. This should be the most sacred of your obligations and should come first. It is the "preferred creditor," and you'll find that all your other creditors will be willing to stand back while you pay it. For it insures the payment of every other obligation. A man who is saving is trusted and helped. His credit is good. He can "do things." People place confidence in him.—Chicago Tribune.

DAVID GARRICK.

The Great Actor's Art and His Wife's Ruffled Feelings.

Mrs. Garrick's admiration of her husband's dramatic talents was intense, and on his great nights she would hang over her box next the stage in rapturous delight. The one flaw in her idol, she claimed, was a taste for low life, for which she blamed him greatly, insisting that he loved better to play Scrub to a low lived audience than one of his superior characters before an audience of taste.

On one particular occasion she was in her box in the theater when Garrick's impersonation of Richard III, was applauded to the echo. In that day a farce followed the tragedy of the evening, and as Mrs. Garrick rose to leave before it her husband came to the box to say he had some business in the greenroom which would detain him, so most unwillingly the lady was obliged to acquiesce and remain through the closing entertainment.

This characterization was received with such peals of applause that Mrs. Garrick, ever zealous of her husband's fame, began to think it rivalled those lately lavished on Richard III. Her feelings were newly worked up to fever heat when she was attracted by the frantic efforts of her little spaniel dog to overleap the balcony that separated him from the stage, when she immediately became aware of the truth that the actor was Garrick and exclaimed, "Strange that a dog should know his master when the woman who loved him best in the world could not pierce his disguise."

CATFISH FURNISHED POWER.

Music Was Necessary to Get Them in Motion.

They got to telling fish stories on the ship on which Billy Morgan was a passenger across the Atlantic. Booth Tarkington, the Indiana novelist, got off a pretty good one about a shark which finally saved the captain's life by keeping other sharks away from him when he was shipwrecked.

It was a good story until Billy Morgan smiled his way into the little bunch and began to talk about the Bowersock herd of deborned catfish up at the Lawrence dam. It is an old story in Kansas, of course, but it was a long way from home, and Billy had to go into details to make the bunch believe it. And so this is what he told 'em:

"Some years ago Mr. Bowersock, who owns the dam that furnishes power for the mill and other factories, conceived the idea that the big Kaw river catfish going through the mill race and on to the water wheel added much to the power generated. Then he read that fish are very sensitive to music. So he hired a man with an accordion to stand over the mill race and play. The catfish came from up and down stream to hear the music and almost inevitably drifted through the race on to the wheel and increased the power."

"The fishes' horns used to get entangled in the wheel and injure the fish, so Mr. Bowersock, who is a kind hearted man and very persistent, had a lot of the fish caught and deborned, and in a year or two he had a large herd of hornless catfish. These fish not only turn out to hear the music, but they have learned to enjoy the trip through the mill race and over the wheel, so that every Sunday or other whole families of catfish—and they have large families—come to Bowersock's dam to shoot the chutes, something like people go out to ride on the scenic railway."

"Whenever the water in the river gets low Mr. Bowersock has the band play, and the catfish gather and go round and round over the wheel, furnishing power for the Bowersock mill when every other wheel on the river is idle from lack of water."—Kansas City Journal.

Poor Material For a Son-in-law.
"Well, what is it?" demanded the head of the firm. "You're not going to ask me for another raise of salary?"

"No," replied the young man. "I am going to ask you for something much more important than that. I wish to ask for your daughter's hand in marriage."

"Um! You consider her more important than a raise of salary, do you?"
"Yes, sir, far more important."
"Then you can't have her. I should be ashamed to have such a boob as you in my family."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Plain Hunger.
"Doctor, what disease is the most prevalent among the poor?"
"An alarming condition in which the nerve terminations in the stomach, stimulated by accumulated secretions of the gastric glands, send irritations to the spinal cord, by way of the pneumogastric nerve."

"Goodness! How awful! And to think that we rich people can do nothing for those unfortunate sufferers!"—Cleveland Leader.

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBURY, Route 6, Box 13, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.
