ABOVE THE CLOUDS

Minds of Librarians not on Things Mundane.

Their Peculiar Absent-Mindedness as a Class, Has Given Rise to Some Good Stories Told by the Wits.

According to a familiar anecdote, an aged and absent-minded librarian, missing his umbrella as he started homeward on a rainy day, went back to the library and sought it in the catalogue under U.

More recent and perhaps as credible is a little tale of another librarian, younger, but not less absorbed in his profession. As the telephone was out of order, his wife asked him to attend to a few errands for her on his way to the library. On his consenting, she ran to his desk, and hastily taking the nearest card—one from a packet of sample library supplies—made out a list, which she handed to him. He put it in his pocket and promised not to forget it.

At dinner that night she reminded him of his promise.

"I was going to give you your favorite dessert—hot gingerbread with raisins in it, and whipped cream," she assured him, reproachfully, "but I had no ginger and not enough raisins, so couldn't. The grocer didn't bring them, or anything else I ordered. You must have forgotten, after all."

"Indeed, I didn't forget," he assured her earnestly. "I am perfectly sure I attended to it."

"That's odd," was the answer. "They're not usually careless about orders. What clerk did you see?"

"Clerk?" he repeated, vaguely. "I don't seem to remember seeing any clerk." Then, in a flash of enlightenment, he added, with a gasp: "Why, I didn't see any. I—I did attend to the list—but I'm afraid I filed it in the card catalogue, under 'Groceries'." And there, indeed, he found it the next day.

On another occasion, when his wife, wishing to know the whereabouts of their small daughter, inquired: "Where's Evellina?" she was horrified to receive the reply:

"Evellina got pushed off the top of the step ladder. Back broken, and more or less damaged otherwise. A pretty bad case, I'm afraid."

"What?" exclaimed the startled mother.

"Yes; a pity, isn't it? But the binder I've sent her to is a clever fellow, and he may be able to make her presentable again."

By this time the mother had begun to understand that "Evellina" so horribly injured was not the daughter of the house, but only an early and bound copy of the famous novel of Mme. d'Arday—Youth's Companion.

Chief Missed Valuable Booty.

A remarkable recovery of stolen heirlooms and jewelry has afforded great gratification to the owner, a lady living at Chelsea gardens, London, England. During her absence some days ago, her flat was broken into, and an old-fashioned brass-bound jewel case taken away. The thieves abstracted from it a necklace, some silver, and various articles of comparatively small value, and even broke away the looking-glass in the lid. In the belief that all the valuables had been taken, the thieves threw the dressing-case into a thicket in Chelsea gardens. The following day it was found by a workman and taken by him to Cannon-row police station. A police officer, while examining it, happened to touch a secret spring, which released a drawer containing all the owner's valuables, including jewel rings, medals which had belonged to her father, and many other highly-prized relics.

The Embalmed Egg.

The Journal of the American Medical Association comments on a recent discovery that antiseptics, given in a hen's food, affect the eggs and practically enable the hen to embalm her own eggs. It is hinted that this discovery will be found to have great commercial possibilities. The farmer, we are told, will feed the antiseptic to his hens and become his own storage warehouse.

This is delightful information to those who like embalmed food. All others will view this great discovery with cold suspicion. What we want in the way of eggs is not eggs that can't spoil, but eggs that can spoil but haven't.

Bona Fide Risk.

Take your wife and children, for instance; were they not once a good honest risk? What are you trying to make of them now—securities? My dear sir, that is just what accounts for your present domestic miseries. You have been applying a financial system to romance. The trouble is not that your financial system did not apply; the real trouble has been along that your financial system itself is thoroughly sound. Of course, the very fact that it did not apply to romance should settle that point—Richard Rice, Jr. in the Atlantic.

Must Have Been Over Sixty.

"What," enthusiastically exclaimed the man of forty who was attending the 'coming-out' party, "is more beautiful than a girl of twenty who is just budding into womanhood?"

"Well," replied the man of sixty, "if you really want my opinion, I should say a nice, new, twenty-dollar bill."

Hurting Their Sale.

The disease among horses brought from the west, and sold in Lancaster county, is injuring their sale. More than a score of western horses have died within the last few weeks, and there are a great many sick at this time.

The coats are beautifully trimmed with silk braids and Macrame lace, long, rolling collar inlaid with silk, turn back cuff of silk, lined with finest peadeu cygne silk. Skirts are all the newest modes.

137 Women's and Misses' $15 Silk Dresses at $7.50

These dresses were made for a leading specialty store, but were not shipped, owing to some disagreement as to time of delivery. The makers, therefore, sold them to us at such a sacrifice that we can offer you the newest of the new styles at a price which enables you to buy two or three dresses, for the usual cost of one. They're of taffetas in plain colors and changeable effect, foulards in dots, figures and bordered effects, messalines in plain colors and stripes and natural colored pongees. Many are prettily trimmed with lace yokes, lace and fancy buttons. They're just the kind of dresses for use at Atlantic City and other resorts as well as in town, and at the price it will be worth your while to buy several. All women, Misses and small women can be fitted. (Second Floor.)
