Mount Joy Citizens Gladly Testify and Confidently Recommend Doan's Kidney Pills

It is testimony like the following that has placed Doan's Kidney Pills so far above competitors. When people right here at home raise their voice in praise there is no room left for doubt. Read the public statement of a Mt. Joy citizen:

Miss Mary A. Stoner, Donegal St., Mt. Joy, Pa., says: "Kidney trouble in my case was caused by a strain. The secretions from kidneys were unnatural and my back ached most of the time. When suffering in this way I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and I got a box at Garber's Drug Store. They lived up to all the claims made for them. I was given prompt relief and was benefited in every way. (Statement given October 26, 1907.)

Time Is The Test

On January 29, 1910, Miss Stoner was interviewed and she said: "The great benefit I derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills has been permanent. I gladly confirm my former testimonial."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Mr. Witmer says, "I can speed my auto to such a velocity that the wheels only touch the ground once every quarter of a mile.

Washing is no longer considered a burden in Mastertonville, since all the women have substituted a soap which washes the wash itself.

The trout season has opened but none of our fishermen have as yet had an opportunity to show their skill. Wait until Amos Garman and Chas. G. Becker go and return from their fishing trip you shall see some trout.

John Hostetter is agent for a sheep carrier, a new invention which carries the sheaves from the wagon to the highest part of the barn, there by saving time and labor in harvesting the grain. For particulars call on John, at his office.

Sunday school every Sunday at Mt. Hope and Chiques churches. Everybody is welcome to attend and join the Sunday school army. We wish parents would come with their children and show an earnestness for this exceptionally important work.

The literary society held their last meeting on Friday evening and a large audience was present. The Elizabethtown college quartet, which is celebrated for its excellent music, gave the audience a treat which was highly appreciated. They sang eleven selections and one man stated that the only criticism he could offer was that they should have sung an hour longer. The question for debate, Resolved, "That the Rural School Should be Consolidated," was defended by Howard Morkey and Raymond Gebb on the affirmative and C. G. Becker and William Warner on the negative. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

Brethren Love Feasts

Hotel Opening

In the Spring W. S. Kaufman became proprietor of the Exchange Hotel at Mastertonville. He has made some changes and improvements and will hold his grand opening on Thursday evening, May 2. A chicken supper will be served and everybody is welcome to be present and partake of the feast.

Diller Was Elected

In accordance with the order of the Court several ballot boxes were opened at the Commissioners' office Saturday and it was found that I. N. Diller was nominated for Democratic National Delegate by seven majority instead of one as the election boards had counted.

HOME OF NOTABLES

Razing of Old Arlington Hotel Recalls Many Stories.

Famous Hospitality Was Scene of Numerous Merry Gatherings of Prominent Men of the Past as Well as of Present.

Washington. — The contemplated wrecking of the old Arlington hotel, to make room for a modern structure, brings to the memory of many of the old residents of the capital interesting happenings that occurred there in the days gone by.

Almost adjoining the Arlington on Sixteenth street is St. John's Episcopal church, a famous landmark. It was built after the war of 1812 with the encouragement of President Madison, and for nearly two generations it was the "court church," attended by every president before Lincoln.

Across Sixteenth street lived the late John Hay, secretary of state, and his immediate neighbor, Henry Adams, grandson of John Quincy Adams. In the next house lived Senator Sibley before he was Confederate ambassador to France. The corner house immediately adjoining that of Sibley was owned and occupied by Daniel Webster during the whole period when he was secretary of state.

In the heart of these surroundings it was not surprising that the Arlington hotel, when opened in 1870 by Roessle & Son, soon became a stamping ground for the nation's leading men. T. E. Roessle, as manager, understood the value of comfort and good dinners to men of status. He was one man in a thousand to fill the position he had made for himself, and his hotel, run more on an artistic than a commercial basis, gained steadily in favor.

Roessle believed in fine paintings and fine statuary, and made yearly trips to Europe to pick up the best he could find. The hotel is now full of the rare treasures he brought from Europe. A rare painting of Charles II. in the restaurant always excites the admiration of art connoisseurs. Roessle did not hesitate to ship old-fashioned, sombre furniture all the way from Europe if he thought it would please the taste of his patrons. This love for the artistic had the effect of making the hotel a rendezvous for the noblest of the nation. It was in Washington and made the reputation of the Arlington known in Europe as well as in America.

Roessle used to say that "even the loftiest statesmanship is impotent to accomplish results without the support of an adequate cuisine." Roessle likewise appreciated the value of rare wines. He visited the wine cellars of Europe and shipped the rarest he could find to his cellar in the Arlington. He shipped regardless whether the supply was high or low. The result was that the Arlington wine cellar became one of the most widely known south of New York.

The Arlington's terrapin and canvas back duck were famous, as was the game served there. Old southern cooking was cultivated so that a diner there became the logical meeting place for a discussion of affairs of state or national importance.

In the spacious old-fashioned dining room and restaurant were always found the Irish chefs, with their negro servants. There is one old negro, George Washington, known as one of the most tactful and diplomatic old darkies in the United States. He got his training at the Arlington and boasts proudly of having waited on all the most celebrated men for the last forty years.

Practically all the presidents stopped at the Arlington for their inauguration from 1870 up to President McKinley's time.

"What's the outlook? What's the betting at the Arlington hotel?" Thomas B. Reed, long speaker of the house of representatives, died at the Arlington, as did Senator Mark Hanna, one-time Secretary of State Walter Q. Gresham and erstwhile Postmaster General Henry C. Payne.

It was at the Arlington that Senator Root made his home when he first came to Washington. Senator Aldrich when he comes to Washington slips in quietly to the Arlington. Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic leader of the house, now lives there.

ON THE CANAL ZONE.

The attention which the Panama canal commission has devoted to the social welfare of its 40,000 workmen has been rewarded by the personal interest which the men take in the early completion of the gigantic waterway. With the elimination of yellow fever and other diseases from the canal zone, and the better standard of living attained, the isthmus has become quite a desirable place of residence.

Throughout the whole length of the canal clean, comfortable houses have been built for the married employees and their families. Eighteen big hotels were also erected for the bachelors, besides numerous barracks, messes and kitchens for the laborers. In these buildings there are under the commission's care not fewer than 65,000 people.

The white canal and railroad employees are furnished with free house, electric light, coal and water, and all laborers and employees have commissary rights which enable them to purchase in the government stores at practically cost prices, clothes, food and other necessities which permit them to live well and inexpensively and save a considerable part of their salaries.

The public schools of the zone are very good. The teachers are American and native. The gardens established in many of them have been such a success that the Panama government is adopting the same method in its provincial schools.

Under the management of the Y. M. C. A. there are club houses in the principal zone towns, wherein employees, after a hard day's toll, may read or play billiards. There are also tennis courts, bowling alleys or ~~stadiums~~.

The erection and maintenance of these clubs have added much to the welfare of the men, and in the long run has been an excellent investment.

NAVAL MILITIA EFFICIENT.

According to Commander A. H. Davis of the navy, the naval militia of the United States made considerable advance in efficiency during the last year and increased in numbers by more than 480 officers and enlisted men. The attendance at the summer exercises was good. Commander Davis says that the great drawback to successful summer work is the difficulty of getting the organization out for a uniform and sufficiently long period. For some organizations the period has been only one week, the limit of time the men could get away from their work.

In his opinion, in case of organizations having ships, the training period should be at least two weeks in order to carry out individual and combined drills, maneuvers and target practice. It was owing to lack of time, he says, that only three organizations were able to have target practice during the rendezvous at Gardiner's bay last summer.

Commander Davis says the target practice was satisfactory and reflected credit on the naval militia. He adds that the value of assigning naval officers to naval militia vessels for the annual summer exercises has been proved. While aboard the ships the naval officers act as advisers and instructors. This, he says, has resulted in a better understanding by naval militia officers of their relations with the navy.

Greater uniformity in training for naval militia is reported by Commander Davis, who says that the more modern equipment furnished by the department and the clearer knowledge of record keeping and accountability on the part of the naval militia have resulted in greater ease in supplying the wants of the organization.

STORY OF A DOG.

Although William B. McKinley of Illinois is almost the wealthiest member in congress, he is one of the quietest and most unassuming of men. Those who know him at close range tell many a story of his kindly heart and generous nature.

"One hot day," says a man associated with Mr. McKinley in business, "we were at work in the office when a little dog came sneaking in to escape the misery of blistering sidewalks. A worse specimen of tatterdemalion dog I never saw. It was emaciated and owned a bushy, unkempt coat that made hot weather a horror to it. Its ears were ragged and there was a hunted, homeless look in its pathetic eyes. It turned these pathetic eyes on McKinley, who was trying to catch up with a hard day's work. In a few minutes he laid down his pen, left the room and returned with a bowlful of water. I was called away. When I came back I found the congressman with a newspaper spread over his knees and upon it stood that dog. A pair of scissors which had cut off millions of dollars in coupons was shearing away at the ragged coat of the wretched little beast, which was looking up with almost human gratitude in its pathetic eyes.

"What are you doing?" I asked. "I'm getting the hot coat off this poor little pup. He's in misery," answered the congressman, in his quiet way.

"Since that day McKinley has had a shadow in the shape of a small mongrel that any dog fancier would cast outside the pale of classified canines."

TO PROTECT OUR HEALTH.

Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, who has introduced a bill in congress for the creation of a national bureau of health, recently in a public address discussed in a convincing manner the reasons why such a bureau should be established. "The death rate in the United States," he said, "is 16% in 1,000. In New Zealand, with no better climate, it is 3 1/2 to 1,000—a net difference of 7 to the thousand. This means an annual loss of about 630,000 persons in the United States from preventable causes—a vast procession of 1,700 persons a day for 365 days in every year marching to needless graves.

"Three million people are seriously sick in the United States on an average from preventable causes, of whom 1,000,000 are workers. The death loss has a commercial value of $2,000,000,000. The loss of productive power from sickness through preventable causes and the nursing and caring for the sick will amount to $2,000,000,000 more. If this loss were saved and the value compounded it would in one generation equal our entire national wealth.

"We spend millions protecting the country from the boll weevil, the gypsy moth and the Canada thistle. Shall we continue to spend money to protect ourselves against the Texas tick and spend nothing to provide for the human life of the nation?"

Grove—Hershey

Miss Elsie Hershey, of town was quietly married Sunday at high noon to Irad Forney Grove, of Lancaster, at the home of his parents in Harrisburg, by the Rev. C. H. Grove pastor of the Green street Church of God. Mr. Grove is in the undertaking business in Lancaster. After a honeymoon through the East the newlyweds will reside at 116 Pearl street, Lancaster. The bride is a graduate of the Mount Joy High School, Class of '09.
