THE SCRAP BOOK

Carrier Pigeons.
The interesting exhibition of military carrier pigeons has been attracting more than ordinary attention in Berlin. The birds are grouped in six ordinary classes and one special class, and the six classes are based on the distance of flight of which the birds are capable. Thus the first class comprises birds able to cover a distance of 300 miles in one flight, the second a distance of 240, the third, 180, the fourth 120, and the fifth a distance of 60 miles. The sixth class are birds whose traveling capacity has not yet been ascertained. The use to which the birds may be put for obtaining information in military service is astonishing, and the manner in which they are employed for taking photographs of any given object is most interesting. A small apparatus weighing about two ounces is fastened round the neck of the pigeon, and as it is possible to calculate to a moment the exact time at which the pigeon will reach the point where the photograph is to be taken, the apparatus is so set that at the precise moment it automatically opens and closes, having in the meantime secured the photograph. It is evident that such highly-trained birds are of the greatest service in time of war, and the price they realize is, therefore, as high as $125 each.

Chinese Sailors.
There is a growing disposition on the part of shipowners and officers in various parts of the world to send to China for complete crews. For most ships particularly when first employing such crews, it is necessary to carry about a third more Chinese for the same service. On the other hand there are many officers and owners who claim that with such additional allowance of help a vessel is run more easily and efficiently, and that all things considered, the Chinese sailor is the best all-round man aboard ship to be found anywhere. He is adaptable from forenoon to galley, is industrious, has little or no desire to leave the ship in port, and therefore gives little or no trouble from drunkenness or desertion. As soon as they become accustomed to foreign ways Chinese crews are as efficient as and often more efficient than foreign crews man for man, and some companies pay their Chinese crews practically as much man for man as they do white crews and carry the same complement they would do of white employees.

Hearing in the Blind.
An investigation conducted some time ago into the ability of bats when flying in a room to avoid hitting chairs and tables, and even to skim without touching along the edges of wires placed across the room concluded that the bats felt their way by following the minute currents of air which probably flow along the edges of surfaces. Another explanation is suggested by some experiments made by M. Truschel at the Institution for the Blind in Paris. Very many blind people become aware of an object when it is very quietly brought near them. Many experiments to test this faculty have been made and this sixth sense has been called "sense of obstacles," "facial perception," "sense of direction," and the difficulty of defining it has been emphasized by the very contradictory accounts which the blind are themselves able to give of their perception. M. Truschel has come to the conclusion that the perception is of an ordinary kind, and is due to the fact that the object reflects and alters surrounding sounds.

Britain's Sweet Tooth.
A quarter of a century ago the people of the United Kingdom drank just over five pounds of tea each in a year. Now Britons drink almost 6 1/2 pounds. But in Australia they require almost seven pounds a head and in New Zealand 7 1/2 pounds. In the dominions they drink tea at every meal and between meals. Russia, with its samovar, needs only one pound of tea a head; the United States 1 1/2 pounds and Canada 4 1/2 pounds. Much of the tea drunk is now grown within the empire.

Historic Tree.
In the park at Haverdine the beautiful fir-tree planted by King Edward in celebration of his visit to Mr. Gladstone at the castle was uprooted by the heavy weight of snow, the other day. Several fine cedars in the park have also been destroyed.

Treasures of the Deep.
The richest prizes of the ocean are sperm whales, yielding spermaceti from their brain-cases, ivory from their lower jaws, and rich yellow oil from their sides.

For Sale
Barred Plymouth Rock eggs for hatching, from a strain with a record not often beaten, also stock.
