

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 24 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 31 stamps. HAGER & BRO.

June White Days at The Hager Store

June White Days are always interesting at the Hager Store—they mean so much. The beautiful snowy white garments and fabrics lend a charm that is particularly suggestive of Cupid Time and Commencement Days. Brides and graduates always depend upon the Hager Store to supply them with dainty outfits—and their many friends do likewise when selecting gifts.

A "World of White" is awaiting you—in many departments.

Lovely Hand Embroidered French Linen Specially Priced

Never before have we been able to secure such splendid French Linen at these remarkable prices. We are conservative in stating that our special June prices are at least a fourth to a third below the usual ones for garments of this character. Our own direct importation.

All garments are made of fine, sheer muslin—many of the finer ones being made by hand. It seems that the beautiful patterns are characteristic of the French idea of beauty—dainty and artistic, light and airy.

A striking feature of these garments will be seen in the clever straight lines. Many women seem to avoid white skirts as much as possible but these with their fitted backs and silhouette outline, will accentuate the desired slender effect rather than mar it.

Fine Corset Covers as low as 68c and up to $2.50. Dainty Chemises at similar prices.

Princess Combinations are very popular with particular dressers because they eliminate all unnecessary bulkiness about the waist and hips. These at $3.98 and up to $4.50.

Drawers in desirable flat effect at 98c and up to $2.25.

Skirts at $1.48, $1.98, $2.98 and $4.50

Night Gowns with round low necks and fancy short sleeves, neatly embroidered—$1.48, and $1.79 to $4.50.

A BON TON, ROYAL WORCESTER OR ADJUSTO CORSET

Miss Hendrick, who has been with us the past week, will be here next week. Miss Hendrick is an expert corsetiere and will be pleased to give you a fitting. Even though you are not in need of a new model at this time, it will be well worth your while to be fitted by this expert—who will give you the style, number and size of your Bon Ton or Royal Worcester—and you may make the purchase at your convenience.

Orations and Essays

Roy H. Longenecker won the salutatory honor, and after performing the pleasing function attending that office, he delivered an oration upon "A Debt of Honor," in which he sought to impress upon the present generation of Americans the obligations under which they rest to their forefathers who secured their liberty and laid the foundation for their advanced civilization, at the same time pointing out the duty of passing on to future generations the heritage.

In studying the records of the nations, he said, the history of America stands out conspicuous above the others. The current of its events seems to have at all times been guided by the hand of Providence. Our country has been a refuge for the oppressed of the world, and as an example to other nations. We find China, the sleeping nation of the earth, awakening because of the influence of America. She respects the American people as she respects no other. The Pilgrim Fathers came to this country not for the sake of conquest, but because they might worship God according to their convictions. Our wars were waged in the cause of freedom. They have given to us an inheritance, not of gold, but that which could not be purchased by gold. But when they gave us this inheritance they also laid upon us the responsibility that, as Lincoln expressed it, "this Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth." There are evils threatening this country that would make this possible, and it is for us to prevent such an event. It is but just and proper that we should spend our efforts in the cause for which our ancestors gave their lives. We owe this as a debt to their memories and we pay it not from compulsion, but because of our personal feeling of gratitude and pity.

"The Promised Land," was the title of an essay read by Lucy Alta Gibbons, in which she cited a notable case to illustrate the priceless advantages that America offers to the oppressed of other lands for obtaining not only freedom from persecution, but the means of obtaining an education and rising to highest attainments when the ability so to do is possessed by the individual who has such ambitions.

She related in an interesting manner the story of a little girl, Mary Ashe, a little girl reared in the Polish settlement of Russia, prefacing it with a description of the oppression to which the Hebrews are subjected to in Russia, the child being of the Jewish faith. The only school-room for the Hebrew girl was her mother's kitchen. The child was eager to study, and her father procured a Hebrew teacher for her. The family came to America, and on the first day in their new home her father led her to school. Her progress was very rapid. She grew to love the country, and was proud of her citizenship in the United States. She carried off graduation honors, and continued to pursue her studies. She went to Barnard, and again won honors, and subsequently she entered into the full current of American life, and became an author, teacher and settlement worker. A characteristic thing about the Russian Jew is that he is not content to progress alone, but what have his family with him, and naturalization with the Russian Jew may mean more than the adoption of the immigrant by America—it may mean the adoption of America by the immigrant.

"The Giant Force" was the title of the High School oration, which was delivered by James Emmett Kendig. The subject with which he dealt was electricity. Franklin told us, he said, that electricity exists in the air. Marconi put the theory in practice by making the first successful wireless telegraph. Everywhere we see evidences of this giant force. The world is being guided and operated by it. Every day men are finding new ways of applying it. Scientists have gone so far as to say that man is operated by electricity. Dr. Andrew McConnell is the chief promoter of this theory. The people of the coming century will see more wonderful things than we even dream of. The effect of electricity upon children at study has been recently tried. For a period of six months children were placed at study in an electrified room, and it was found that they were superior in health, height and the amount of knowledge gained, as compared with the children who had not the treatment. In summing up the subject, the young author referred to the almost limitless possibilities that lie in the future development of this marvelous and mysterious force, which he regarded as the most important factor in the future progress of the race.

Frances Shelly Baileer read an essay on Paul Lawrence Dunbar, in which she paid a fine tribute to the gifted young poet. He was the first poet of African descent, she said, and American civilization, who felt capable of expressing the life of his people lyrically. He was a son of two ex-slaves, and was born in Dayton, Ohio, June 27, 1872. At the early age of seven he wrote his first verse. In the High School he edited his paper, a monthly publication issued by the pupils of the State High School. After graduation he was forced to take a position as an elevator boy. His first address was delivered before the Western Association of Writers, and he published his first verses, "Oak and Ivy," in 1892. On one occasion, after listening to a Toledo man's attack on his race and realizing he was sole defender of his race, he gave an entirely different address than he had prepared to deliver at the same place. Those who heard him were impressed with his genius and touched by the fact that a boy of twenty had espoused the cause of a race numbering more than six millions. A few days before his last birthday, in June, 1905, he wrote a prayer called, "Lead Gently, Kindly Light," which really was his own prayer to God for help. The essayist expressed her opinion that Dunbar's talent was inherited, as his parents, although they had had few advantages, were fond of books.

Elmer Ellsworth Blocher was the valedictorian, and bore the honor with ease and dignity. His oration was entitled, "The Value of Farm Life," in which, among other things, he said:

Farm life has its beauties and values, just as city life has its charms and values, but those of the farm outclass the city. The farm teaches us many useful things. Washington was honest, faithful, persevering, God-fearing because he learned these values on his farm. The farm instills us with the necessity of punctuality. It is also the healthiest life, because of the simplicity of its habits and its outdoor labors. A boy grows to manhood on the farm in constant touch with nature and apart from the temptations of city life. Thus he is purer in his thoughts and economical in his ways. On the farm man gets much of his education. He learns the ways of nature, and everything in the whole world is correlated with nature. As the farm proves valuable to the individual, so it is to the nation, and the farmers shall go on proving their value to the world until they have emblazoned their names and fame high up amid the stars, and the people will honor them in the words which Holmes employs in his poem, "The Plowman."

Faculty and Directors

If Mount Joy wants the patronage of any of her Eastern neighbors, the Boro Fathers should be up and doing something to the Traction Co. On the night of the Commencement exercises we noticed on the streets twenty-five or thirty persons waiting for an eastbound car due at Mount Joy 11.45. The car previous left at 9.15, about 2 1/2 hours between cars. The night was fine and the air general and there was no actual suffering but imagine a stormy winter night and the result.

NEWTOWN

Mr. James Metzler and wife visited relatives in this place on Sunday.

Henry Witmer and wife were Sunday visitors at the home of Christian Rigel in West Hempfield.

Mr. John Kemery and wife paid a visit to their daughter, Mrs. Jennie Koehler on Sunday.

Mr. Amos Gallagher returned to his home in Steelton after a short visit to his sister Mrs. Rufus Hipple.

Peraching services were held by the pastor on Sunday morning. Similar services will be held on Sunday evening, June 16.

The quarantine for diphtheria on the premises of William Fogie was lifted last Sunday after a period of three weeks isolation, all the patients having fully recovered from the disease. Gladys, the little girl afflicted with diabetes, is slowly recovering.

A BIG PARADE

Appropriate Services Held Here Last Thursday. Big Crowd Present

As is the custom in Mount Joy, Memorial Day is always appropriately observed, by decorations, services, parade, etc., and it seems to be the general impression that this year's demonstration exceeded those of former occasions—but whether or no this be the case—we had a fine day, big crowd of people, good music, good parade and no accidents, which was all that one could expect.

In the forenoon the G. A. R. and S. of V. decorated the graves of the old heroes in the various cemeteries hereabouts. Promptly at 2 p. m. the parade formed and marched over all the principal streets of town. By actual count there were 641 in line.

Back in a Week

"Billy" Morrison, a motorman on the local trolley line, had an idea he would prefer the Lititz run, but after killing an hour doing eight miles for one week, we are pleased to see him among us once more. It is intimated around Rohrerstown that "Doc" Ringwalt will give a "strawberry seton" in honor of his "home-coming" very soon.

Will Clean the Basin

If the weather man does not interfere the reservoir will be cleaned on Sunday. The water will be shut off at 11.30 Saturday night.

Miss Belle W. Leader of Elizabethtown, spent several days in town with Mrs. Sarah Brady.
